A student-friendly anthology that covers race and ethnicity, global issues, and possible solutions to racial inequality

(UN)MAKING RACE AND ETHNICITY

A Reader

Edited by Michael O. Emerson, North Park University, Jenifer L. Bratter, and Sergio Chávez, both at Rice University

Race and ethnicity is a contentious topic that presents complex problems with no easy solutions. (Un)Making Race and Ethnicity: A Reader, edited by Michael O. Emerson, Jenifer L. Bratter, and Sergio Chávez, helps instructors and students connect with primary texts in ways that are informative and interesting, leading to engaging discussions and interactions. With more than thirty collective years of teaching experience and research in race and ethnicity, the editors have chosen selections that will encourage students to think about possible solutions to solving the problem of racial inequality in our society.

Featuring global readings throughout, (Un)Making Race and Ethnicity covers both race and ethnicity, demonstrating how they are different and how they are related. It includes a section dedicated to unmaking racial and ethnic orders and explains challenging concepts, terms, and references to enhance student learning.

SUPPLEMENTS

The Ancillary Resource Center (ARC) includes a digital copy of the Instructor’s Manual, which offers multiple-choice and essay test questions, critical thinking questions, discussion questions, web links, and annotated lists of related videos and films.

A GLOBAL VIEW OF RACE AND RACISM
Judy Root Aulette, UNC-Charlotte

A Global View of Race and Racism is the only text currently on the market that explores race and racism from a global perspective. With a clear and direct writing style, author Judy Root Aulette places an emphasis on sociological concepts as an organizing factor. Featuring nine short chapters focused on a broad range of nations around the world, this brief text examines central concepts and issues in racial/ethnic studies including apartheid, assimilation, colonialism, multi-ethnicity, caste, ethnonationalism, white frames, genocide, migration, and affirmative action. Each chapter discusses the ways in which racist structures and practices have been or are being challenged. Chapters also include critical thinking questions and highlighted key concepts and terms, which are summarized in a glossary at the end of the book.

SUPPLEMENTS
An Instructor’s Manual includes, for each chapter, a summary; test questions; discussion questions and class activities; and web links to relevant newspaper and magazine articles, videos, and popular culture sites, with brief descriptions of how they tie in to chapter content.

The only ethnography to examine family-based legalization from the perspective of families who undertake it

BECOMING LEGAL

Immigration Law and Mixed-Status Families

Ruth Gomberg-Muñoz, Loyola University Chicago

There are approximately eleven million undocumented people living in the United States, and most of them have family members who are U.S. citizens. There is a common perception that marriage to a U.S. citizen puts undocumented immigrants on a quick-and-easy path to U.S. citizenship. But for people who have entered the U.S. unlawfully and live here without papers, the line to legal status is neither short nor easy, even for those with spouses who are U.S. citizens.

Becoming Legal: Immigration Law and Mixed-Status Families follows mixed-status couples down the long and bumpy road of immigration processing. It explores how they navigate every step along the way, from the decision to undertake legalization, to the immigration interview in Ciudad Juárez, Mexico, to the effort to put together a case of “extreme hardship” so that the undocumented family member can return. Author Ruth Gomberg-Muñoz also discusses families’ efforts to rebuild their lives in the aftermath of immigration processing—both for those who are successful and those who are not.
