Darjeeling Reconsidered
Histories, Politics, Environments
Edited by Townsend Middleton, University of British Columbia, and Sara Shneiderman, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Offering a timely challenge to popular conceptions of Darjeeling, the ‘queen of the hills’, this collection of essays provocatively rethinks Darjeeling’s place in the postcolonial imagination. Combining the best of the social sciences and humanities, Darjeeling Reconsidered sheds fresh light on the region’s past and offers critical insight into the issues facing its people today. Doing so, it frames Darjeeling as a crucial site for South Asian and Postcolonial Studies.

Atrocity Speech Law

Foundation, Fragmentation, Fruition
Gregory S. Gordon.
The Chinese University of Hong Kong Faculty of Law

This book is the first comprehensive study of the international law encompassing hate speech. Prof. Gordon provides a broad analysis of the entire jurisprudential output related to speech and gross human rights violations for courts, government officials, and scholars. The book is organized into three parts. The first part covers the foundation: a brief history of atrocity speech and the modern treatment of hate speech in international human rights treaties and judgments under international criminal tribunals. The second part focuses on fragmentation: detailing the inconsistent application of the charges and previous prosecutions, including certain categories of inflammatory speech and a growing doctrinal rift between the ICTR and ICTY. The last part covers frustration: recommendations on how the law should be developed going forward, with proposals to fix the problems with individual speech offenses to coalesce into three categories of offense: incitement, speech-abetting, and instigation.

Why Children Follow Rules

Legal Socialization and the Development of Legitimacy

Tom R. Tyler, Yale University, and Rick Trinkner review the literature on socialization with a particular focus on families, schools, and the juvenile justice to reveal a fundamental conflict about how authority and power should be exercised in essential social institutions. They argue for the merits of consensual authority as a way to foster the popular legitimacy of the law at a time when public trust in the police, courts, and the law has reached unsettling lows.

Justifying Violence

Communicative Ethics and the Use of Force in Kosovo

Naomi Head, University of Glasgow

Justifying Violence applies a critical theoretical approach to an interrogation of the communicative practices which underpin claims to legitimacy for the use of force by actors in international politics. Drawing on the theory of communicative ethics, the book develops an innovative conceptual framework which contributes a critical communicative dimension to the question of legitimacy that extends beyond the moral and legal approaches so often applied to the intervention in Kosovo.

How Investment Management is Shaped
Diane-Laure Ajaliés, Ivy Business School, Western University, Philip Grant, School of Social and Political Science, University of Edinburgh, Iain Hardie, University of Edinburgh, Donald MacKenzie, University of Edinburgh, and Ekaterina Svetlova, University of Leicester
This book suggests that investment decisions cannot be understood by focusing on isolated investors. Rather, most of their money flows through a chain: a sequence of intermediaries that ‘sit between’ savers and companies/governments. It argues that investment management is shaped by the opportunities and constraints that this chain creates.

Mafia Life
Love, Death, and Money at the Heart of Organized Crime
Federico Varese
University of Oxford
- A compelling new account of life inside the mafia from a leading authority
- Federico Varese is a prize-winning author and leading authority on organized crime

Today, mafias operate across the globe, with hundreds of thousands of members and billions of dollars in revenue. From Hong Kong to New York, these vast organizations spread their tentacles into politics, finance and everyday life. Criminologist Federico Varese draws on a lifetime’s research to give us access to some of the world’s most secretive societies. Mixing reportage with case studies and historical insights, this is the story of mafia as it really is: filled with boredom and drama, death and disaster, ambition and betrayal.

Within the Limits
Moral Boundaries of Class and Gender in Urban India
Amanda Gilbertson. Australia India Institute, University of Melbourne
Delving into the social location of middle classes in India, this work explores what it means to be middle class in the south Indian city of Hyderabad. Taking into account aspects such as education, marriage, community values, and contemporary trends, the book highlights the centrality of moral discourses in the co-production of class and gender in urban India. Through the lens of moral respectability, the author discusses how middle class sensibilities are embraced and reproduced by the Hyderabadis.

Sexual Identities: A Cognitive Literary Study
Patrick Colm Hogan, University of Connecticut
Patrick Colm Hogan, a leading theorist of cognitive cultural studies, offers the first cognitive cultural study of identity in sex, sexuality, and gender. With precise conceptual distinctions, wide-ranging citation of empirical research, and careful explication of diverse literary works, Hogan defends a systematic skepticism about gender differences and a view of sexuality as evolved but also contingent and variable.

Feminist Perspectives on Social Work Practice:
The Intersecting Lives of Women in the 21st Century
Edited by Shannon Butler-Mokoro, Salem State University, and Laurie Grant, Reading a Fork in the Road
This book takes a contemporary look at the issues that affect women most from a feminist perspective. Going beyond the equal pay for equal work issue, the authors write about mental health, substance abuse, disabilities, parenting, relationships, criminal justice, and aging, all from a holistic and intersectional perspective.

Kicking up Dust:
Azra Abbas and Samina Rahman
This book is a biography of the author and very skillfully presents a picture of her childhood, juxtaposing childish playfulness with the realities of the urban middle class she lived in. A number of the author’s poems, also translated by Samina Rahman, are included in the volume as well.

From Stasis to Mobility
Arab Muslim Feminists and Travelling Theory
Saiyma Aslam, International Islamic University, Islamabad
This book takes into account the confluence of different factors in studying pressures on, and prospects for, the mobility of Arab Muslim women. Saiyma Aslam discusses Arab Muslim feminism as a travelling theory which is deeply sensitive to global realities. The book explores the works of two writers, the Moroccan sociologist Fatima Mernissi and the Egyptian novelist Nawal El Saadawi, who call attention to the stasis in domestic gender relations and the processes of change under global restructuring.

The Rise of Neoliberal Feminism
Catherine A. Rottenberg, Goldsmiths, University of London
The Rise of Neoliberal Feminism demonstrates how the notion of a happy work-family balance has not only been incorporated into the popular imagination as a feminist ideal but also lies at the heart of a new variant of feminism, one that has abandoned any commitment to equal rights or emancipation. This book underscores the ways in which neoliberal feminism forsakes the vast majority of women, while facilitating new and intensified forms of racialized and class-stratified gender exploitation. Given our frightening neoliberal reality, the monumental challenge, then, is how we can successfully reorient and reclaim feminism as a social justice movement.

Consent on Campus
A Manifesto
Donna Freitas, University of Notre Dame
Americans have finally started to pay attention to the sexual assault crisis on our college campuses. Yet, Donna Freitas warns, the way universities educate students about sexual assault and consent is wholly inadequate. Universities are, she argues, more focused on avoiding lawsuits and scandals than on addressing the heart of the problem. Freitas advocates for teaching not just how to consent but why it’s important to care about consent—and for doing so in the university’s most important space: the classroom. Consent on Campus is a call to action for university administrators, faculty, parents, and students themselves to create cultures of consent on their campuses.

Headcase
LGBTQ Writers & Artists on Mental Health and Wellness
Edited by Stephanie Schroeder, and Teresa Theophano, Services and Advocacy for GLBT Elders (SAGE)
Headcase illustrates the intersection of mental wellness, illness, and LGBT identity, as well as the lasting impact of historical views deeming that to be gay or lesbian equated mental illness. The collection of pieces contained therein offer personal views from both providers and clients, often one and the same, talking about their experiences. The text breaks new ground in documenting issues in LGBTQ mental health care with superbly written and powerfully rendered personal and political stories and images.

The Oxford Handbook of American Sports Law

Edited by Michael A. McCann, University of New Hampshire School of Law

The Oxford Handbook of American Sports Law is a timely and engaging compilation of commentaries by leading experts on the most significant issues in US sports law. The book blends analysis of historical and contemporary controversies with prescriptions for how courts and lawmakers can reconcile the competing interests of leagues, owners, and players. The Handbook also establishes a foundation for future research on sports law issues. As technology and social media alter the ways fans, athletes, and team officials interact, legal doctrine will be challenged to adapt, and the Handbook both forecasts these debates and outlines where the law may be headed.

Advancing Health and Well-Being

Using Evidence and Collaboration to Achieve Health Equity

Edited by Alonzo L. Plough, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

In this second volume of the Culture of Health series, Advancing Health and Well-Being convenes experts from academia, policy, journalism, and community-based organizations, to examine how data and narrative can catalyze progress toward building a national Culture of Health.

Tackling topics such as health inequality, mass incarceration, and climate change, Advancing Health and Well-Being does more than draw lines between cause and effect; its 70+ voices lend context and lived experience to critical conversations that may lack such elements. The result is a work that shows the power and promise of evidence and collaboration.

NEW IN PAPERBACK

Random Families
Genetic Strangers, Sperm Donor Siblings, and the Creation of New Kin
Rosanna Hertz, Wellesley College, and Margaret K. Nelson, Middlebury College
- Includes over 350 interviews from donors and both parents and children in the same families
- Sheds light on critical processes like choosing a donor among parents and the development of identity among children with an unknown donor
- Chronicles the choices couples and single moms make, from conceiving, to accepting donors into their families, to discovering that other children share their child’s DNA

The world of sperm banks and egg donors has given rise to an entirely new form of family. Children of the same donor and their families, with the help of social media and the internet, can now locate each other and make contact. Based on over 350 interviews with children and parents, Rosanna Hertz and Margaret Nelson share the remarkable relationships woven from tenuous bits of information and transforms them into a highly readable analysis of life at the intersection of reproductive technology, social media, and the human desire for intimacy and identity.

Pressure Cooker
Why Home Cooking Won’t Solve Our Problems and What We Can Do About It
Sarah Bowen, North Carolina State University, Joslyn Brenton, Ithaca College, and Sinikka Elliott, University of British Columbia
- Challenges many cherished ideas held by food pundits and writers who proclaim growing your own food and family meals as a solution to many social ills like obesity or diabetes
- Argues that positioning the kitchen and family meals as solutions to many social problems places a disproportionate burden on individual families – and mothers in particular

Food reformers tell Americans to slow down. Cook from scratch. Eat dinner together. But is it really that simple? Pressure Cooker brings readers into the homes and kitchens of a diverse group of mothers to uncover what it really takes to feed the modern family and what really needs to change to ensure a fair, healthy, and sustainable food system that nourishes everyone.

Building Cultures and Climates for Effective Human Services
Understanding and Improving Organizational Social Contexts with the ARC Model
Anthony L. Hemmelgarn, Children's Mental Health Services Research Center, University of Tennessee, and Charles Glisson, University of Tennessee, College of Social Work

Many healthcare, behavioral health, and social service organizations provide ineffective services. In Building Cultures and Climates for Effective Human Services, the authors use their own case examples, nationwide studies, and randomized controlled trials to explain how these organizations can remove service barriers and support the use of evidence-based practices and other innovations by changing their cultures and climates.

The American Nonvoter
Lyn Ragsdale, and Jerrold G. Rusk, both at Rice University
The American Nonvoter examines how uncertainty regarding the national context influences people’s decisions whether to vote or not. During times of national crisis, when uncertainty is high, voting increases; during times of stability and relative prosperity, people stay home. Using rigorous statistical tools and rich historical stories, Lyn Ragsdale and Jerrold G. Rusk show how uncertainty in the national campaign context reduces nonvoting in presidential and midterm elections from 1920 to 2012.

Contesting the Repressive State
Why Ordinary Egyptians Protested During the Arab Spring
Kira D. Jumet
Hamilton College

For years prior to the Arab Spring, opposition activists in Egypt organized protests with limited success. So why and how did thousands of Egyptian citizens suddenly take to the streets against the Mubarak regime in January 2011?

Contesting the Repressive State not only answers this question, but asks specifically why and how people who are not part of political movements choose to engage or not engage in anti-government protest under repressive regimes. Ultimately, Kira D. Jumet explores how social media, violent government repression, changes in political opportunities, and the military influenced individual decisions to protest or not protest.

Exile, Diaspora, and Return
Changing Cultural Landscapes in Argentina, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay
Luis Roniger, Wake Forest University; Leonardo Senkman, Hebrew University; Saul Sosnowski, University of Maryland, College Park; and Mario Sznajder, Hebrew University

During the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries, dictatorships in Latin America hastened the outward movement of intellectuals, academics, artists, and political and social activists to other countries. The authoritarian rulers assumed that they would assure their control of politics and domestic public spheres by forcing opposition movements out of the country. Yet, by enlarging a diaspora of co-nationals, the authoritarian rulers emboldened opposition forces beyond their national borders. Exile, Diaspora, and Return provides the first comprehensive analysis of diasporic experiences and the impact of returnees on the public life, culture, institutions, and development of post-authoritarian politics in the Southern Cone of the Americas.

Honor Bound
How a Cultural Ideal Has Shaped the American Psyche
Ryan P. Brown, Rice University
In Honor Bound, social psychologist Ryan Brown tells the story of how a specific cultural narrative, the ideology of honor, continues to shape the psyche of people around the world, including the southern and western United States. The ideology of honor underlies behaviors from spontaneous bar fights to organized acts of terrorism, but it’s also at work in romantic relationships, mental health and well-being, terrorist attacks, suicide, foreign policy decisions by political leaders, and even how parents name their babies. Throughout this book, Brown reveals the powerful, surprising, and sometimes paradoxical dynamics of honor through personal stories, contemporary events, and scientific research.

Outsourcing Welfare
How the Money Immigrants Send Home Contributes to Stability in Developing Countries
Roy Germano, New York University
In order to meet the International Monetary Fund’s debt-reduction guidelines, many developing country governments have had to retrench their social welfare systems. This book is about how remittances – the hundreds of billions of dollars international migrants send to family members in their home countries each year – are helping to fill this welfare gap and prevent civil unrest in developing countries. Looking particularly at Mexico, with supplemental cases in Africa, the Middle East, the Caribbean, and Latin America, the author argues that counting on expatriates to send money home has become a de facto social welfare policy in many cash-strapped developing countries whose economic policies are guided by neoliberal orthodoxy.

Protest State
The Rise of Everyday Contention in Latin America
Mason W. Moseley, West Virginia University
Drawing on cross-national surveys from Latin America and a case study of Argentina, this book argues that where weak institutions and active citizenries collide, countries can morph into ‘protest states,’ where contentious participation becomes so common as to render it a conventional characteristic of everyday political life. Protest State offers a comprehensive study of one of the most intriguing puzzles in Latin American politics today: in the midst of an unprecedented era of democratic governments and economic prosperity, why are so many people protesting?

Politics at Work
How Companies Turn Their Workers into Lobbyists
Alexander Hertel-Fernandez, Harvard University
• Uses workplace surveys, interviews with top corporate managers, and other research to explore the phenomenon of employee mobilization as a political strategy
• Analyzes the impact of employer persuasion on political participation and democracy
• Proposes realistic policy changes that could protect employees from political coercion
Politics at Work documents how and why U.S. employers are increasingly recruiting their workers into politics – and what such recruitment means for American democracy and public policy.

Why Good People Do Bad Environmental Things
Elizabeth R. DeSombre, Wellesley College
Why do people behave in ways that cause environmental harm? Despite not wanting to create environmental problems, we all do so regularly in the course of living our everyday lives. This book looks at how social structures, incentives, information, habits, attitudes, norms, and the inherent characteristics of environmental resources explain and influence how we behave, and how those causes influence what we can do to change behavior.

Apostles of Certainty
Data Journalism and the Politics of Doubt
C.W. Anderson
University of Leeds
Can journalists use data in order to produce better journalism? In this book, C.W. Anderson traces the genealogy of data journalism and its material and technological underpinnings, arguing that the use of data in news reporting is inevitably intertwined with national politics, the evolution of computer databases, and the history of professional scientific fields. This book shows how the changes in specifically journalistic understandings of evidence can help us think through the current ‘digital data moment’ in ways that go beyond simply journalism.

The Fiscalization of Social Policy
How Taxpayers Trumped Children in the Fight Against Child Poverty
Joshua T. McCabe
Wellesley College
• First and only comparative analysis of the politics of the child tax credit
• Argues that the exceptionally high child poverty rate in the US stems from the introduction of non-refundable child tax credit that excludes the poorest families
The earned income tax credit (EITC) and child tax credit (CTC) are tax credits for low-income families that paradoxically exclude the poorest families. This book challenges the conventional wisdom on American exceptionalism and offers the first and only comparative analysis of the politics on these important anti-poverty tax credits.

American Discontent
The Rise of Donald Trump and Decline of the Golden Age
John L. Campbell
Dartmouth College
• Emphasizes the deep structural and historical factors that enabled Trump’s rise to power, rather than more immediate factors
• Grounded in the underlying economic and political changes in America that stretch back decades, American Discontent provides a short, accessible, and nonpartisan guide to Trump’s rise to power
• Argues that only long-developing trends in the American economy, race relations, ideology and politics stretching back to the 1970s can explain Trump’s rise to power
In American Discontent, John L. Campbell puts Donald Trump’s ascendance to the presidency in context by focusing on the long-developing economic, racial, ideological, and political trends that enabled Trump to win the White House. Grounded in the underlying economic and political changes in America that stretch back decades, Campbell provides a short, accessible, and nonpartisan explanation to Trump’s rise to power.

The White Working Class
What Everyone Needs to Know
Justin Gest
George Mason University
Who are white working class people? What do they believe? What has driven them to break so sharply with the world’s trajectory toward a more borderless, interconnected meritocracy? The White Working Class: What Everyone Needs to Know presents the context for understanding the political ideologies, actions, and behavior of this complicated constituency. Providing an accessible introduction to the white working class, this book argues that they must be understood if the world is to address and respond to the social and political phenomena they are driving.

Citizen-Protectors
The Everyday Politics of Guns in an Age of Decline

Jennifer Carlson, University of Arizona

Why do so many Americans not only own guns but also carry them? In Citizen-Protectors, Jennifer Carlson delves headlong into the world of gun carriers, shedding light on Americans’ complex relationship with guns. Carlson shows how, against a backdrop of economic insecurity and social instability, gun carrying becomes a means of being a good citizen, an idea that pervades the NRA’s public literature, statements, and its training courses.

Social media platforms do not just circulate political ideas, but support computational propaganda, and manipulative disinformation campaigns. Although some of these disinformation campaigns are carried out directly by individuals, most are waged by software, commonly known as bots, programmed to perform simple, repetitive, robotic tasks. Including case studies from nine countries and covering propaganda efforts over a wide array of social media platforms, this book argues that bots, fake accounts, and social media algorithms amount to a new political communications mechanism that it terms ‘computational propaganda’.

Resisting Rights
Vigilantism and the Contradictions of Democracy in Post-Apartheid South Africa
Nicholas Rush Smith, City University of New York
Despite being one of the world’s most vibrant democracies, vigilantism is regularly practiced in South Africa. Based on twenty months of field work, Resisting Rights shows why, explores what South Africa reveals about vigilantism in other democracies, and uses vigilantism to explore contradictions of democracy generally.

A Population History of India
From the First Modern People to the Present Day
Tim Dyson, London School of Economics

This book presents a history of India’s population for the period stretching from when hunter-gatherer homo sapiens first arrived in the country (very roughly seventy thousand years ago) until the modern day. It draws together archaeology, history, and politics to reveal a surprising and often dramatic story.

Political Sociology and the People’s Health
Jason Beckfield, Harvard University
Series Edited by Nancy Krieger, Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health

In a stirring new synthesis, Political Sociology and the People’s Health advances the debate over social inequalities in health by offering a new set of provocative hypotheses around how health is distributed in and across populations. It joins political sociology’s macroscopic insights into social policy, labor markets, and the racialized and gendered state with social epidemiology’s conceptualizations and measurements of populations, etiologic periods, and distributions. The result is a major leap forward in how we understand the relationships between institutions and inequalities – and essential reading for those in public health, sociology, and beyond.

The Hidden Among the Hidden
African-American Elder Male Caregivers

What are the experiences of African-American elder male caregivers? Based on research with twelve African-American caregivers born in the first half of the 20th century, this book captures the complexity and poignancy of the caregiving pilgrimage, and roots men’s caregiving narratives within the biographical and historical context of their lives.

The Power of Race in Cuba
Racial Ideology and Black Consciousness During the Revolution
Danielle Clesland Pilar. Florida International University
The Power of Race in Cuba analyzes racial ideologies that negate the existence of racism and their effect on racial progress, racial attitudes and activism through the lens of Cuba. This work gives a nuanced portrait of black identity and draws from the many black spaces, both formal and informal to highlight black consciousness on the island.

Accumulation by Segregation
Muslim Localities in Delhi
Ghazala Jamil. Jawaharlal Nehru University
Based on ethnographical study of Muslim neighbourhoods, the book argues that it is not merely communal discrimination and prejudice that causes formation of segregated Muslim enclaves. Through an intricately weaved argument the book explains that rather than being excluded from the city, the Muslim areas contain a segment of immobile labour and capital that are uniquely positioned for exploitation in the globalised world. Segregated spaces provide for accumulation in favour of other spaces in the city.

The Best Intentions
How Racial Inequality Thrives in Good Schools
Amanda E. Lewis
University of Illinois at Chicago, and John B. Diamond. University of Wisconsin - Madison

• An eye-opening contribution to a public policy debate that has raged for decades
• Based on five years of in-depth quantitative and qualitative research
• Focusing on a diverse suburban school in a relatively wealthy neighborhood, the authors take the revolutionary approach of looking within the school for clues as to what might cause the racial achievement gap

A rich and disturbing portrait of the achievement gap that persists more than fifty years after the formal dismantling of segregation.

Reconsidering Race
Social Science Perspectives on Racial Categories in the Age of Genomics
Edited by Kazuko Suzuki, and Diego A. von Vacano, both at Texas A&M University
Preface by Henry Louis Gates, Jr, Harvard University
In order to more fully understand what we mean by ‘race’, social scientists need to engage genetics, medicine, and health. While the contributors of this volume reject pseudoscience and hierarchical ways of looking at race, they make the claim that it is time to reassert the Western-based, ‘social construction’ paradigm. Arguing that race is not merely socially constructed, the contributors offer a provocative collection of views on the way that social scientists must reconsider the idea of race in the age of genomics.

Cultural Constructions of Identity
Meta-Ethnography and Theory
Edited by Luis Urrieta, Jr, University of Texas at Austin, and George W. Noblit, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Cultural Constructions of Identity initiates the effort to allow for qualitative and ethnographic studies to speak to identity theory, collectively. Further, while the studies synthesized in this book look at various intersections of race and ethnicity with respect to gender, age, class, and sexuality, Urrieta and Noblit implore readers to consider what these studies reveal about identity and identification theory itself.

Latino and Muslim in America
Race, Religion, and the Making of a New Minority
Harold D. Morales, Morgan State University
Latino and Muslim in America examines how so called ‘minority groups’ are made, fragmented, and struggle for recognition in the U.S.A. Harold Morales follows the lives of several Latino Muslim leaders from the 1970s to the present, and their efforts to organize and unify nationally in order to solidify the new identity group’s place within the public sphere. This book explores the racialization of religion, the framing of religious conversion experiences, the dissemination of post-colonial histories, and the development of Latino Muslim networks, to show that the categories of race, religion, and media are becoming inextricably entwined.

Body & Soul
Notebooks of an Apprentice Boxer
Revised and Updated
Loïc Wacquant, University of California, Berkeley

Loïc Wacquant’s Body and Soul melds Pierre Bourdieu’s signal concept of habitus with Wacquant’s ethnographic observations as an amateur boxer at a gym in Chicago’s South Side. This updated edition features a new preface and postface that elaborate upon Bourdieu’s theory of habitus, demonstrating the ways in which habitus anchors both the method and theory in the book and to provide a genealogy of the concept.

The Generation of Rage in Kashmir
David Devadas,
Jamia Millia Islamia

This book describes the lived experience of Kashmiris who came of age between 2007 and 2017. It shows that Kashmiris generally had high hopes for peace and stability when the militancy that began in 1988 ended around 2006. It explores the reasons why there was so much angst and rage, which exploded in agitations and stone-pelting in 2008, 2010, and 2016 and why a new militancy is on the rise. It traces the decline of hope among the Kashmiris as the situation worsened from a perceived threat to their identity in 2008 to rage over the killing of innocents in 2010. The anger has finally resulted in support for militancy in 2016.

Not for Long
The Life and Career of the NFL Athlete
Robert Turner, Duke University

- As the evidence continues to mount on brain injuries and the long-term health risks from playing football, the fate of retired players will continue to be in the news
- Written and researched from the insider perspective of a former professional football player who earned a PhD after his playing career
- Helps to explain why former football players, despite their fame and perceived wealth, often struggle after life in the NFL.

Drawing on personal experience as a former pro and interviews with over 120 current and former NFL players, Robert Turner gets behind the bravado to reveal what it means to be an athlete in the NFL and why so many players struggle with life after football.

Curated Stories
The Uses and Misuses of Storytelling
Sujatha Fernandes

In Curated Stories, Sujatha Fernandes considers the rise of storytelling alongside the broader shift toward neoliberal, free-market economies to argue that stories have been reconfigured to promote entrepreneurial self-making and restructured as digestible soundbites. Fernandes uses stories from legal proceedings, empowerment workshops, and political campaigns to show how the conditions under which the stories are told, the tropes through which they are narrated, and the ways in which they are responded to can disguise the deeper contexts of global inequality. Not just a critical examination of contemporary use of narrative, Curated Stories also explores how storytelling might be reclaimed to allow for the pursuit of transformative social change.

For 79 days in 2014, Hong Kong became the focus of international attention due to a public demonstration for genuine democracy that would become known as the Umbrella Movement. On the surface, this movement was not unlike other large-scale protest movements that have occurred in recent years. However, it was distinct in how bottom-up processes evolved into a centrally organized, programmatic movement with concrete policy demands. This book analyzes how traditional mass media institutions and digital media combined with on-the-ground networks in such a way as to propel citizen participation and the evolution of the movement as a whole.

An Appraisal of Women’s Political Activism

Edited by Holly J. McCammon, Vanderbilt University, and Lee Ann Banaszak, Pennsylvania State University

The Nineteenth Amendment was ratified in 1920 giving women in the United States the right to vote. 100 Years of the Nineteenth Amendment looks back at this 100-year history and asks, how has women’s political engagement unfolded over the last century? The book’s chapters consider women’s successes in the political realm but also biases that women still confront. Volume contributors pay particular attention to the diverse backgrounds and perspectives women bring to the political arena, reminding us of the insights provided by an intersectional perspective.

The Branding of Right-Wing Activism

The News Media and the Tea Party

Khadijah Costley White
Rutgers University

- A multi-platform study that looks at news coverage in online, print, cable, and broadcast news
- Argues that the Tea Party distinctively placed the news media at its center as both an organizer and active participant
- Documents the contemporary slippages between news platforms, journalistic practice, and the norms that guide the fourth estate

From the start of Barack Obama’s presidency in 2009, conservative populist groups began fomenting political fractionalism, dissent, and surprising electoral success. The Tea Party was one of the major characters driving this story, changing the tone, tenor, and shape of the political landscape, one that this book sees as a product of media branding. Beyond the creation of the Tea Party, this project also investigates what the mass-mediated construction of the Tea Party tells us about the current media and cultural moment, specifically the role of journalism in a Web 2.0 age and contemporary American notions of democracy, citizenship, and belonging.

The University as a Site of Resistance

Identity and Student Politics

Gaurav J. Pathania
University of Southern California

This book explores the role of universities as spaces where debates around social issues get transformed into social action. It focuses on Osmania University in Hyderabad (now Telangana), India, where a long battle for separate statehood was fought by student activists through a series of cultural activities and political processes. It illustrates how students mobilised, networked, and strategized on and off campus to produce creative forms of social movements.

Trade Battles

Activism and the Politicization of International Trade Policy

Tamara Kay
University of Notre Dame, and R.L. Evans
The McHenry Group

- Provides unique and valuable data that traces the effects of activists’ strategies on government policy decisions, and vice-versa
- Contributes to a growing literature that synthesizes the ideas of organizations and social movements by theorizing the dynamics of organizational fields
- Lays the groundwork for a robust understanding of successful social movements within hostile contexts

Trade Battles uses data from over 215 in-depth interviews with Mexican, Canadian, and U.S. trade negotiators, labor and environmental activists, government officials, and extensive archival materials to assess how activists politicized trade policy for the first time during NAFTA negotiations. It also examines how this activism influenced trade policy after NAFTA.

Contentious Rituals

Parading the Nation in Northern Ireland

Jonathan Blake
Columbia University

Although the bombs have stopped going off in Northern Ireland, relations between Catholics and Protestants remain tense and the sectarian conflict has continued in a number of ways, many of them symbolic. One of the major issues that divides the two communities are the thousands of parades performed by Protestants each year to celebrate their culture and heritage – but that Catholics see as bigoted and offensive. On a regular basis, parades trigger protests and sometimes even riots. Given these outcomes, Contentious Rituals investigates why tens of thousands of people choose to take part. Drawing on rich interviews with participants, quantitative survey data, and ethnographic observations, Jonathan S. Blake presents a new look at the people at the center of major conflict in Northern Ireland, with findings that illuminate contested symbols everywhere.

Approaches to Social Research
Sixth Edition
Royce A. Singleton. College of the Holy Cross and Bruce C. Straits. University of California, Santa Barbara
Revised and updated in its sixth edition. Approaches to Social Research is a rigorous yet clear and engaging introduction to research methods. Covering all of the fundamentals in a straightforward, student-friendly manner, it is ideal for undergraduate- and graduate-level courses across the social sciences and also serves as an indispensable guide for researchers. Striking a balance between specific techniques and the underlying logic of scientific inquiry, this book provides a lucid treatment of the four major approaches to research: experimentation, survey research, field research, and the use of available data. Richly developed examples of empirical research and an emphasis on the research process enable students to better understand the real-world application of research methods. The authors also offer a unique chapter (13) advocating a multiple-methods strategy.

Approaches to Ethnography
Analysis and Representation in Participant Observation
Edited by Colin Jerolmack. New York University, and Shamus Khan. Columbia University
Approaches to Ethnography illustrates the various modes of representation and analysis that typify participant observation research. This volume concisely lays out the predominant analytic lenses that ethnographers use to explain social action. Each chapter features a prominent ethnographer delineating a distinct approach to the study of everyday life and reflecting on how their approach shapes the way they analyze and represent the field. Taken together, the collection is a practical guide that spells out how different styles of ethnography illuminate different dimensions of everyday social life for undergraduate and graduate courses on qualitative research methods.

The question of how to quantify the impact and value of research looms large in the minds of academics, policy makers, academic administrators, and scientists. Measuring Research: What Everyone Needs to Know® will provide, for the first time, an accessible account of these processes. Following a brief history of scholarly communication and its measurement, Cassidy R. Sugimoto and Vincent Larivière will look at the classification of knowledge, the role of peer review, emerging issues within the scholarly communication system, and potential changes for measuring research. This book provides a comprehensive guide to understanding the measurement of research and scholarly communication.

Negotiating Opportunities

How the Middle Class Secures Advantages in School

Jessica McCrory Calarco, Indiana University

- Includes observations and interviews with students, parents, and teachers over the course of five years of longitudinal ethnographic research
- Reveals how inequalities result from complex (and often well-meaning) interactions between children, parents, teachers, and schools
- Traces social class-based inequalities from their origins at home to their consequences in school

In Negotiating Opportunities, Jessica McCrory Calarco traces class differences in student behaviors from their origins at home to their consequences in school and demonstrates how complex interactions between children, parents, and teachers collectively contribute to classroom inequality. Drawing on five years of ethnographic fieldwork, she reveals that middle-class students secure advantages over their working-class peers by requesting support in excess of what is fair or required and by persuading teachers to grant their requests.

Reckless Opportunists

Elites at the end of the Establishment

Aeron Davis, Goldsmiths, University of London

The central theme of the book is that the British elite has lost control. They can earn more than ever before and their decisions have powerful consequences that are widely felt. They are highly skilled when it comes to pursuing their own self-interests. But, they are also rather less able to exert control or predict the consequences of their actions. What is best for them can often be bad for their organisation, their employees or publics. These failings have an increasingly devastating effect on society and the wider public.

Someone To Talk To
Mario Luis Small, Harvard University
- Explains the surprising fact that people often confide highly personal matters to people they are not close to, and at times even barely know
- Escapes big data and large-scale network analysis to revisit fundamental questions of who we connect with, why, and how we use those connections

Someone To Talk To reveals the often counter-intuitive nature of social support, showing that Americans often take pains to avoid close friends and family – their ‘strong ties’ – when deciding on whom to rely. In contrast, they often confide in ‘weak ties’, as the need for understanding or empathy trumps their fear of misplaced trust.

History of Education
Policymaking in India, 1947-2016
R.V. Vaidyanatha Ayyar
This book documents the history of education policymaking in India from 1947 to 2016. It provides a nuanced understanding of policy developments from the inception of the Indian Education Commission (1882) to developments in the field of education during the British era, and consequently the post-independence period.

Takeover
Race, Education, and American Democracy
Domingo Morel, Rutgers University
Takeover offers the first systematic study of state takeovers of school districts. Domingo Morel examines the factors that contribute to state takeovers as well as the effects and political implications of takeovers on racialized communities, the communities most often affected by them. Although states have generally justified state takeovers based on poor academic performance, questions of race and political power play a critical role in the emergence of state takeovers of local school districts.

Race, Criminal Justice, and Migration Control
Enforcing the Boundaries of Belonging
Edited by Mary Bosworth, Monash University, Alpa Parmar, Oxford University Centre for Criminology, and Yolanda Vázquez, University of Cincinnati College of Law
In an era of mass mobility, those who are permitted to migrate and those criminalized, controlled, and prohibited from migrating are heavily patterned by race. This volume places race at the centre of its analysis; fourteen chapters examine, question, and explain the growing intersection between criminal justice and migration control.

The Making of a Salafi Muslim Woman
Paths to Conversion
Anabel Inge,
King's College London
Salafism, often called ‘Wahhabism,’ is widely seen as a fundamentalist interpretation of Islam that subjugates women, yet growing numbers of young British women, many of them converts or from less conservative Muslim backgrounds, are actively embracing it. With unprecedented access to Salafi women's groups in the UK, Anabel Inge provides the first in-depth account of their lives, probing the reasons for their conversion and their subsequent dilemmas and difficulties.

If You Meet the Buddha on the Road
Buddhism, Politics, and Violence
Michael Jerryson,
Youngstown State University
Drawing on Buddhist treatments of violence, this book explores Buddhist invocation, support, or justification of war, conflict, state violence, and gender discrimination. In addition, it examines the ways in which Buddhists address violence as military chaplains, cope with violence in a conflict zone, and serve as witnesses of blasphemy to Buddhism.

NEW EDITION

The Missing Martyrs
Why Are There So Few Muslim Terrorists?
SECOND EDITION
Charles Kurzman, UNC
In this startlingly counterintuitive book, a leading authority on Islamic movements demonstrates that terrorist groups are thoroughly marginal in the Muslim world. Charles Kurzman draws on government sources, public opinion surveys, election results, and in-depth interviews with Muslims in the Middle East and around the world, finding that while young Muslims are indeed angry at the West, they are simply not attracted to terrorist methods. This revised edition, updated to include the self-proclaimed ‘Islamic State,’ concludes that fear of terrorism should be brought into alignment with the actual level of threat, and that government policies and public opinion should be based on evidence rather than alarmist hyperbole.

URBAN & RURAL STUDIES

The Creative Destruction of New York City
Engineering the City for the Elite
Alessandro Bussi, Urban Reinventors Journal
The Creative Destruction of New York City tells the story of fifteen years of shocking urban changes in New York City under the administrations of Bloomberg and de Blasio, and identifies the urban regime of city producers who are rebuilding cities like New York for a brand new global class of super-wealthy city consumers.

The Pragmatist
Bill de Blasio’s Quest to Save the Soul of New York
Joseph P. Viteritti, Hunter College
The two main characters of Joseph Viteritti’s The Pragmatist – Bill de Blasio and New York City itself – are used to tell the story of the rise, fall and rebirth of progressivism in America’s major urban center, and in the process introduce us to the contributions and distractions of every mayor since La Guardia, demonstrating that the road to progress was never a direct journey.

The Cities on the Hill
How Urban Institutions Transform National Politics
Thomas K. Ogorzalek, Northwestern University
In The Cities on the Hill, Thomas Ogorzalek argues that the answer lies not in the sectional divide, but in the urban-rural divide. To that end, he focuses on how the latter divide shaped the trajectory and geography of partisan politics in America, and locates its roots in the New Deal.

Delhi’s Meatscapes
Muslim Butchers in a Transforming Mega City
Zarin Ahmad, Centre for Social Sciences and Humanities, New Delhi
This work is about the Qureshi Muslim butchers of Delhi – an endogamous group among Muslims in India, traditionally involved in the Islamic Halaal slaughtering and selling of animal meat. It looks at the lives of urban occupational groups who are engaged in the meat sector, the commodity meat, and the socio-political, economic, and cultural spaces that meat occupies in urban areas.

The Digital Street
Jeffrey Lane, State University of New Jersey
It is simply no longer possible to understand coming of age in the inner city without an appreciation of both the face-to-face and online relations that structure neighborhood life. In The Digital Street, Jeffrey Lane takes readers on- and offline with black teenagers navigating Harlem’s rapidly-changing streets to examine how digital social media alters neighborhood life in poor, minority communities.
