Kings and Usurpers in the Seleukid Empire

The Men Who Would be King
Boris Chrubasik, University of Toronto

This volume focuses on ideas of kingship and power in the Seleukid empire, specifically the role of usurpers. Redefining the king as only one of several political players, it advances a political history predicated on social power and argues that despite its strong rulers the empire was structurally weak and the position of its kings precarious.

Byzantium and the Bosporus

A Historical Study, from the Seventh Century BC until the Foundation of Constantinople
Thomas Russell, Teacher of Classics

This volume is a historical study of the ancient city of Byzantium, before it became Constantinople then Istanbul, and its relationship with the Bosporus strait. It explores how this relationship shaped many facets of its inhabitants’ lives and illustrates how the region’s history cannot be understood in isolation from its geographical context.

Staging Memory, Staging Strife
Empire and Civil War in the Octavia
Lauren Donovan Ginsberg, University of Cincinnati

This book offers a new reading of the Octavia as a staging ground in the memory wars surrounding Nero’s fall. Through an innovative combination of cultural memory theory and intertextual analysis, Ginsberg argues that the play reimagines the imperial family as waging war on itself and its people, challenging their claim that with empire came peace.

The Jewish War
Josephus, Translated by Martin Hammond, Retired Headmaster of Tonbridge School

Edited by Martin Goodman, Oxford Centre for Hebrew and Jewish Studies

In AD 70 the city of Jerusalem was destroyed by Roman forces after a 6 month siege, the world-famous temple burnt to the ground. This was the disastrous outcome of a Jewish revolt against Roman domination beginning in AD 66 with high hopes and early success, but soon became mired in factional conflict, at its most extreme within Jerusalem itself.

John Duns Scotus

Edited and Translated by John van den Bercken, Radboud University

In this book Scotus addresses fundamental issues concerning the limits of human knowledge and the nature of cognition by developing his doctrine of the univocity of being, refuting skepticalism and analyzing the way the intellect and the object cooperate in generating actual knowledge in the case of abstractive cognition.

Mystical Resistance
Uncovering the Zohar’s Conversations with Christianity

Ellen D. Haskell, The University of North Carolina at Greensboro

Mystical Resistance reveals the kabbalistic masterpiece Sefer ha-Zohar, commonly known as the Zohar, as a rich source for understanding Jewish resistance to Christian authority. Composed against a backdrop of rising religious intolerance, the Zohar’s subversive mystical narratives critique the changing relationship between Europe’s Christian majority and its Jewish minority.

Robert Holcot

John T. Slotemaker, Fairfield University, and Jeffrey C. Witt, Loyola University Maryland

This is an introduction to the thought of Robert Holcot, a Dominican friar who flourished in the 1330s. Although Holcot produced a diverse and influential body of work including scholastic treatises, biblical commentaries, and sermons—he is often overlooked today. In this book John Slotemaker and Jeffrey Witt restore Holcot to his rightful place as one of the most important thinkers of his time.

Great Medieval Thinkers

The Abbots and Priors of Late Medieval and Reformation England

Martin Heale, University of Liverpool

The first extended history of the men who presided over medieval England’s monasteries, examining monastic structures, lifestyles, and public relations. Heale explores how monastic roles evolved through the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries to the Dissolution of the monasteries, when monastic superiors surrendered their houses to Henry VIII.

Royal Bastards

Sara McDougall, John Jay College of Criminal Justice and the CUNY Graduate Center

- The birth of illegitimate children in medieval Europe
- Rethinks many long-held notions of medieval social, political, and legal history
- Challenges our ideas about the role of women and female lineage in medieval society

The stigmatization as ‘bastards’ of children born outside of wedlock is commonly thought to have emerged early in Medieval European history, but Sara McDougall demonstrates that until well into the late twelfth century a child’s prospects depended more upon the social status and lineage of both parents than of the legitimacy of their marriage.

The Antiquary

Jackson Williams: The Antiquary

Kelsey Jackson Williams, University of St. Andrews

- The first-ever biography of Alessandro de’ Medici, arguably the first black head of state
- Draws on extensive archival research of first-hand sources
- An accessible and dramatic retelling of Renaissance politics and rivalry

The riveting tale of Alessandro de’ Medici’s unexpected rise and spectacular fall, which unravels centuries-old mysteries, exposes forgeries, and brings to life the epic personalities of the Medici, Borgias, and others as they waged sordid campaigns to rise to the top.

The Reformation

Remembering the Reformation

An Agency into the Meanings of Protestantism

Thomas Albert Howard, Valparaiso University

- Explores various meanings attributed to Protestantism by examining past Reformation commemorations
- Argues that Reformation and Protestant identity has functioned as a crucial ritual of memory, a prophylactic against group forgetfulness and the dissipation of identity

This work examines how and under what circumstances past commemorations have occurred. In Germany these stretch back to the Reformationsjubiläum of 1617. Many other celebrations have followed, including those marking the anniversaries of Luther’s birth (in 1483) and death (in 1546).

The Protestant Oath and Popular Political Culture in the English Revolution
John Walter, University of Essex
A new take on the origins of the English civil war and English Revolution, offering the first full study of the Protestantation, the first state oath to be issued under parliamentary authority, swearing loyalty to king and country, but with the radical outcome of offering a political voice to those hitherto excluded by class, age, or gender.

Friendship and its
Discourses in the Seventeenth Century
Cedric C. Brown, University of Reading
Cedric C. Brown presents a fresh account of the immense importance of friendship bonds to early modern society. Drawing on new archival research, he acknowledges a wide range of types of friendship, from the intimate to the obviously instrumental, and sees these practices as often co-terminous with gift exchange.

Early Modern
Indentured Migration and the Servant Trade from London to America, 1618–1718

There is Great Want of Servants

John Wareing, University of North London

The first full examination of the English trade in indentured servants, who paid for their transportation and keep, and continued to work unpaid for years on their arrival. Often these people were deceived and coerced, despite half-hearted government efforts to curtail the activities of what was, after all, a useful crime for the English state.

Debates on Civilization in the Muslim World
Critical Perspective on Islam and Modernity
Lutfi Sunar, Istanbul University, Department of Sociology
In the social sciences, civilization is one of the most oft-debated concepts. However, debates around civilization are still framed by Western assumptions and concerns - as with the very idea of civilization itself. Nevertheless, civilization remains a central theme in the Muslim world. Encounter with the concept and fact of civilization is comprised of a series of investigations that include multi-dimensional analyses. The overall objective of this volume is to expose complex issues for further discussion pertaining to civilization.

of this period had consequences in wider regional, transnational, and international terms – and for what purpose? And, if so, under what conditions and for whom? This book examines how the national and regional sovereignty of pre-modern Europe was remade during the course of the nineteenth century, especially in the wake of the French Revolutionaries and the Napoleonic Wars. It discusses how the French Revolutionaries remade the pre-1789 system of sovereignty, property from the realm of sovereignty to public power from the sphere of property and excising property from the means through which the Peresies managed their business empire and the contribution of family life to its success. It is their first full-scale biography in English.

The emergence of race and colonialism as integral to modern Italian national culture, rather than a marginal afterthought or a Fascist aberration. This book explores the memory of the war of independence in France as viewed by the former European settlers (pieds-noirs) and the harkis, those Algerians who worked for the French security forces. It examines how the memorial dynamics of the two groups are related both to each other and to other memories of the war.

Lateness and Brahms
Music and Culture in the Twilight of Viennese Liberalism
Margaret Notley, University of North Texas

Lateness and Brahms takes up the fascinating, yet understudied problem of how Brahms fits into the culture of turn-of-the-century Vienna. Brahms’s puzzling absence in previous scholarly accounts of the time and place raises important questions, and as Margaret Notley demonstrates, the tendency to view him in neutralized, ahistorical terms has made his music seem far less interesting than it truly is.

East, West and Centre
Reframing post-1989 European Cinema
Edited by Michael Gott, and Todd Herzog, both at University of Cincinnati
In East, West and Centre the world’s leading scholars in the field assemble to consider the ways in which notions such as East and West, national and transnational, central and marginal are being rethought and reframed in contemporary European cinema. Assessing the state of post-1989 European cinema, from (co)production and reception trends to filmic depictions of migration patterns, economic transformations and socio-political debates over the past and the present, they address increasingly intertwined cinema industries that are both central (France, Germany) and marginal (Romania, Bulgaria, Lithuania) in Europe.

This prodigiously researched book gives a political and institutional history of the Muslims of south-east Europe, examining the thinking that informed the solution for the so-called ‘minorities problem’.

Matthew Frank, University of Leeds

Twentieth-century Europe saw many international schemes for the forced resettlement of national minorities, and Making Minorities History draws a comprehensive and wide-ranging historical narrative of this population transfer, explaining the thinking that informed the solution for the so-called ‘minorities problem’.

Mark Hewitson, University College London

The second of three volumes from Mark Hewitson which explore the experiences of conflict in modern Germany, and the resounding impact of these across Europe and the world. The People’s War takes a new look at the ‘wars of unification’ and charts the rise of nationalism and the breakdown of the existing state system in the 1850s and 1860s.

Jean-Luc Nancy provides an analysis of the anti-Semitic aspects of Heidegger’s recently published Black Notebooks. Nancy refers to a philosophical or ‘historical’ anti-Semitism marked, nonetheless, by the ‘banality’ of ordinary anti-Semitism pervading Europe. Heidegger’s thought is placed in the context of the so-called ‘third period’.

From Vichy to the Sexual Revolution
Gender and Family Life in Postwar France
Sarah Fishman, University of Houston
In the decades after World War II, French ideas about gender and family life underwent dramatic changes, laying the groundwork for the sexual revolution of the 1960s. This book offers a broad view of changing lives and ideas about love, courtship, marriage, giving birth, parenting, childhood, and adolescence in France from the Vichy regime to the sexual revolution of 1960s.

Challenging the Modern
Conservative Revolution in German Music, 1918–1933
Nicholas Attfield, Brunel University
The Weimar Republic is often seen as an era of progress for the arts, but strands of pessimism and conservatism also developed rapidly. In this cultural atmosphere, music and musical scholarship could provide forms of protest and resistance to modernity. Attfield’s concentration on continuity challenges the received historiography of this period.

Socialist Politics & Popular Music in Albania

Dr. Nicholas Tochka, University of Maryland

In Audible State: Socialist Politics and Popular Music in Albania, author Nicholas Tochka traces an aural history of Albania’s government through a close examination of the development and reception of light music as it has long been broadcast at an annual song competition, Radio-Television Albania’s Festival of Song. Drawing on a wide range of archival resources and over forty interviews with composers, lyricists, singers, and bureaucrats, Tochka describes how popular music became integral to governmental projects to improve society— and a major concern for both state-socialist and post-socialist regimes between 1945 and the present.

When Sonia Met Boris

Anna Shternshis, University of Toronto

- Based on an unprecedented number (476) of in-depth oral history interviews with Soviet Jews, this book reveals previously unknown stories of everyday life for Jews in the Soviet Union, as well as how individual Jews responded to notorious instances of repression, e.g., the Doctor’s Plot

- One of the first monographs to use oral testimony to discuss postwar Soviet Jewish daily life, showing that oral history sources have an increased value in the context of Soviet Jewish history, since details about Jewish daily life are unavailable in other sources

Based on nearly 500 oral history interviews, When Sonia Met Boris is an innovative study of Jewish daily life in the Soviet Union, giving a long-suppressed voice to the Jewish men and women who survived the sustained violence and everyday hardship of Stalin’s Russia.

Russia’s Empires

Valerie A. Kivelson and Ronald Suny, both at University of Michigan

Russia’s Empires explores the long history of Russia, the Soviet Union, and the present Russian Federation through the lens of empire, analyzing how and why Russia expanded to become the largest country on the globe and how it repeatedly fell under the sway of strong, authoritarian leaders. Authors Valerie A. Kivelson and Ronald Grigor Suny examine how imperial practices shaped choices and limited alternatives. Using the concept of empire, they look at the ways in which ordinary people imagined their position within a non-democratic polity – whether the Muscovite tsardom or the Soviet Union – and what concessions the rulers had to make, or appear to make, in order to establish their authority and preserve their rule.

For The Motherland! For Stalin! A Red Army Officer’s Memoir of the Eastern Front
Boris Bogachev, Retired - Soviet Army
Translated by Maria Bogacheva
Introduction and Notes by Professor Geoffrey Roberts
A compelling memoir that covers the period from the German invasion in 1941 up to 1946 when, after ‘helping’ with the elections to the Supreme Soviet in western Ukraine, the author managed to gain a place at the Military Law Academy in Moscow.

Bid for World Power?
New Research on the Outbreak of the First World War
Edited by Andreas Gestrich, German Historical Institute London, and Hartmut Pogge von Strandmann, University College Oxford
This volume takes a fresh look at the outbreak of the First World War, fifty years after Fritz Fischer’s controversial Germany’s Aims in the First World War. It collects the latest research by prominent scholars, frequently based on new archival findings. The essays provide an excellent overview of the complex history of the outbreak of the war.

An English Governess in the Great War The Secret Brussels Diary of Mary Thorp
Tammy M. Proctor, Utah State University, and Sophie De Schaepdrijver, Utah State University, and Tammy M. Proctor
The Secret Brussels Diary of Mary Thorp
Belgian-Russian family in German-occupied Brussels, kept a secret war diary from September 1916 to January 1919. This long-forgotten diary sheds light on an important aspect of the First World War: civilian life under military occupation in a transnational conflict.

Churchill and the Dardanelles
Over the Shadow of the Dardanelles
Christopher M. Bell, Dalhousie University
The story of the Dardanelles – the campaign which nearly destroyed Churchill’s reputation for good and of his decades-long battle to set the record straight – a battle which ultimately helped clear the way for Churchill’s appointment as Prime Minister in Britain’s ‘darkest hour’.

The Treaty of Versailles: A Concise History
Michael S. Neiberg, US Army War College
This book presents an introduction to one of the most important treaties ever written, the Treaty of Versailles, which formally ended World War I in 1919. Controversial from the very beginning, the treaty still shapes the destinies of societies and states worldwide. Its authors had the enormous challenge of trying to put the world back together after the global destruction of the First World War amid competing national interests and the demands of their populations for justice.

Masculinities on Clydeside

Men in Reserved Occupations During the Second World War

Alison Chand, University of Strathclyde

Did the Second World War represent a catalyst for social change in Britain? What was the impact of being in reserved employment on masculinity? How were experiences of war in a specific British region different and unique? These questions are addressed in Masculinities on Clydeside, an examination of the civilian men who worked in reserved occupations on Clydeside during the Second World War and the importance of the people and places of their everyday lives. Ultimately, the book argues that, in social and historical change, the individual should never be forgotten.

The Evangelical Age of Ingenuity in Industrial Britain

Joseph Stubenrauch, Baylor University

It demonstrates that developments in technology, commerce, and infrastructure in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries were closely linked to theological shifts and changing modes of religious life as British evangelicals developed new methods of spreading the gospel and new forms of personal religious practice.

Manchester

Making the Modern City

Edited by Alan Kidd and Terry Wyke, both at Manchester Metropolitan University

A visually stunning and affordable book on Manchester, the first industrial city and arguably the first modern city. Yet, as the industrial base on which the city had depended for two centuries collapsed, the city had to take a new direction. Written by leading experts with numerous insights and unexpected stories, this profusely illustrated book on the history of Manchester is essential for an understanding of what Manchester has been and what it can become.

The Making of the Oxford English Dictionary

Peter Gilliver, Oxford University Press

• The first detailed history of the origins, making, and evolution of the Oxford English Dictionary
• Draws on a wealth of archival material, some previously unexplored

This book tells the history of the Oxford English Dictionary from its beginnings in the middle of the nineteenth century to the present. Drawing extensively on archival and other sources, it traces the conception of the idea of the Dictionary in the 1850s right up to the launching of the Dictionary as an online database in 2000 and beyond.

Mistress of Everything

Queen Victoria in Indigenous Worlds

Edited by Sarah Carter, University of Alberta, and Maria Nugent

Mistress of Everything examines how indigenous people across Britain’s settler colonies engaged with Queen Victoria in their lives and predicaments, incorporated her into their political repertoires, and implicated her as they sought redress for the effects of imperial expansion during her long reign. It draws together empirically rich studies from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Southern Africa, to provide scope for comparative and transnational analysis.

Dear Mr Vengeance
A Working Class Community in a Seventeenth Century Seaside Town
Christopher Hilliard, University of Sydney
• Recovers the story of a poison-pen mystery that led to a miscarriage of justice in a seaside town in the years following the First World War
• Offers a convincing account of a painstaking and ingenious police investigation into a libel case
• Recovers the words and word-play of working-class people in the early twentieth century
Littlehampton in the 1920s was menaced by a bizarre poison-pen case, which required the attention of a leading Metropolitan Police detective, and resulted in four criminal trials before the real culprit was finally punished. The Littlehampton Libels untangles this mystery story, exploring the inner lives of an English working-class community.

Governing Hibernia
K. Theodore Hoppen, University of Hull

- Offers the first systematic survey of Britain’s Irish policy from the start to the end of Anglo-Irish Union
- Explores how British politicians switched back and forth between coercion and assimilation
- Looks at the Anglo-Irish situation from both London and Dublin perspectives

The first book to examine in detail how British ministers and politicians sought to govern Ireland throughout the period of Anglo-Irish Union (1800–1921), this trenchant and original account argues that British politicians had little understanding or time for Irish matters, and oscillated between policies of coercion and assimilation.

K. Theodore Hoppen, University of Oxford

- Uses unique histories of life on the Irish Border to explore how politics, nation, and the state intersected with everyday life
- Examines both sides of the border and how political developments affected both jurisdictions
- Combines anthropological and traditional historiographical approaches to create a very human account of Irish culture and politics

While ‘the border question’ raged throughout twentieth-century Ireland, citizens near the border continued with everyday life. Peter Leary uses histories of the Foyle Fisheries dispute, cockfighting tournaments, smuggling, and local conflicts over cross-border roads to explore how the border was experienced and incorporated into people’s lives.

The End of Outrage
Post-Famine Adjustment in Rural Ireland
Brendán Mac Suibhne, Centenary College, New Jersey
Tells the absorbing story of post-famine Donegal, the Molly Maguires - a secret society who had set themselves up against the exploitation of the rural poor – and Patrick McColgan - an avaricious schoolmaster who turned informer on them, availing of hunger, disease, debt, hardship, and death to expand his holding at the expense of his neighbours.

Local Glories

Opera Houses on Main Street, Where Art and Community Meet

Ann Satterthwaite

This book explores the creative, social, and communal roles of thousands of ‘opera houses’ that appeared in towns in the late 1800s and flourished with an astounding array of cultural performances and public activities until the advent of movies. Now, these entertainment halls are now coming back to life as theaters and art centers, as people become increasingly aware of the deep role that early opera houses played in the lives of residents.

CORNERING THE MARKET

Independent Grocers and Innovation in American Small Business

Susan V. Spellman, Miami University

Popular stereotypes of Rockwellian small grocers have characterized grocery retailers as backward and resistant to modernizing impulses. Cornering the Market challenges these conventions to show that early grocers were important but unsung innovators, revolutionizing business practices from the bottom, and transforming the grocery trade from local enterprises to a nationwide industry.

RIGHTS DELAYED

The American State and the Defeat of Progressive Unions, 1935–1950

Charles Romney, University of Arkansas-Little Rock

Progressive unions flourished in the 1930s, yet in 1950, few progressive unions remained. Why? Rights Delayed argues that anti-communism and Congressional conservatism merely intensified the main reason for the decline of progressive unions: the New Deal state’s focus on legal procedure.

City of Gods

Religious Freedom, Immigration, and Pluralism in Flushing, Queens

R. Scott Hanson, University of Pennsylvania, and Martin E. Marty

City of Gods is a history and ethnography of Flushing, Queens in New York City. An important site in colonial America for its place in the history of religious freedom. Flushing is now perhaps the most striking case of religious and ethnic pluralism in the world – and an ideal place to explore how America’s long experiment with religious freedom, immigration, and religious pluralism began and continues.

Mission Failure
America and the World in the Post-Cold War Era
Michael Mandelbaum, Johns Hopkins-SAIS
• Argues that inertia shaped the American response to the end of the Cold War and its policies since
• Shows that post-Cold War American foreign policy shifted its goals from containment to transformation
• Traces the way in which the United States’ vast resources facilitated the political and ideological extension of the West
In Mission Failure, Mandelbaum argues that, in the past 25 years, U.S. foreign policy has undergone a significant shift. Historically, U.S. foreign policy was oriented primarily toward threat reduction, but the U.S. military has turned in recent years to missions that are largely humanitarian and socio-political.

Woodrow Wilson
A Spiritual President
Barry Hankins, Baylor University
• Highlights that Woodrow Wilson was profoundly influenced by Calvinist theology and viewed his political career as a sacred calling
• Probes into the spiritual pilgrimage of this conflicted and tragic figure
• Focuses on the theological views and spiritual practices that undergirded Wilson’s public role and how the challenges of his public life shaped those practices
Woodrow Wilson was easily one of the most religious presidents in American history. Yet, his religion has puzzled historians for decades. This book tells the story of Wilson’s religion as he moved from the Calvinist orthodoxy of his youth to a progressive, spiritualized religion short on doctrine and long on morality.

Canadian-American Relations in the Kennedy Era

Asa McKercher, McMaster University

An examination of Canada-U.S. relations during John F. Kennedy’s presidency, Camelot and Canada focuses on the connection between domestic and foreign policy, in particular the development and impact of Canadian nationalism and its effect on foreign affairs, and the growth of anti-Americanism as well as American policies towards its northern neighbor.

Before the Fires

An Oral History of African American Life in the Bronx from the 1930s to the 1960s

Mark Naison, Fordham University, and Bob Gumbs

Bind Us Apart

How Enlightened Americans Invented Racial Segregation

Nicholas Guyatt, University of Cambridge

The study of USA’s on-going failure to achieve true racial integration, Bind Us Apart shows how, from the Revolution through to the Civil War, white American anti-slavery reformers failed to forge a colour-blind society.

Dividends of Development

Securities Markets in the History of U.S. Capitalism, 1866–1922

Mary A. O’Sullivan, University of Geneva

This book explains how U.S. securities markets became central to the institutional fabric of U.S. capitalism. It claims that the U.S. securities markets took a particular, even peculiar, form that reflected the distinctive trajectory of economic development that the United States experienced from the Civil War through World War I.

Defenceless Under the Night

Matthew Dallek, George Washington University

Narrates a relatively forgotten moment of wartime homefront history and national security. Features clashes between larger than life figures, including Fiorello LaGuardia, Eleanor Roosevelt, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Offers a history of the precursor agency to the Department of Homeland Security. Even before the attack on Pearl Harbor, Americans feared an invasion or attack would occur on U.S. soil. In this timely and authoritative book, Matthew Dallek narrates the creation of a federal agency, the Office of Civilian Defense, founded to protect the homeland.

Who Rules the Synagogue?

Religious Authority and the Formation of American Judaism

Zev Eleff, Brandeis University

Who Rules the Synagogue? explores how American Jewry in the nineteenth century transformed from a lay dominated community to one whose leading religious authorities were rabbis.
Doom Towns
The People and Landscapes of Atomic Testing, A Graphic History
Andrew G. Kirk, University of Nevada Las Vegas
Illustrated by Kristian Purcell
Doom Towns explains critical technological developments and the policies that drove weapons innovation within the context of the specific environments and communities where testing actually took place. The book emphasizes the people who participated, protested, or were affected by atomic testing and explains the decision-making process that resulted in these people and places becoming the only locations and groups to actually experience nuclear warfare during the Cold War.

Jonathan Edwards and Transatlantic Print Culture
Jonathan M. Yeager, University of Tennessee at Chattanooga

In this book religious historian Jonathan Yeager provides a narrative of the publishing history of Jonathan Edwards’s works in the eighteenth century, including the various printers, booksellers, and editors responsible for producing and disseminating his writings in America, Britain, and continental Europe. In doing so, Yeager demonstrates how the printing, publishing, and editing of Edwards’s works shaped society’s understanding of him as an author and what the distribution of his works can tell us today about religious print culture in the eighteenth century.

Deployed ideas within and beyond the borders of periodicals – in which people have articulated and circulated in different cultures. It also examines national, institutional, and intellectual boundaries.

American thinkers and their ideas as they have crossed changing color line.

As a message about women, men, race and the epidemic of cinematic and literary epidemiological writings of scientific, medical, and materialist sensibility on the frontier. Written from Jeffersonian idealism on the Atlantic to a practical, nationalism thinned as it stretched west, from the contemporaries Meriwether Lewis and William Clark. Through Pike’s life, Orsi examines how American nationalism thinned as it stretched west. from the Jeffersonian idealism on the Atlantic to a practical, materialist sensibility on the frontier. Written from an environmental perspective, rich in cultural and political context, Citizen Explorer is a state-of-the-art biography of a remarkable man. After the murder of Joseph Smith in 1844, Mormon leaders organized a massive exodus of church members from the plains of Illinois to the safety of Utah. In their first decade in the Salt Lake Valley, Brigham Young and his counselors in the church’s First Presidency produced the fourteen ‘general epistles.’ These letters, collected here, provide invaluable perspectives on the events of Mormon history as they unfolded during this complex transitional time.

The Smell of Battle, the Taste of Siege
A Sensory History of the American Civil War
Mark M. Smith, University of South Carolina
• No other book has looked at the Civil War through the prism of the five senses, or considered their impact on various groups of individuals
• The engaging accounts from diaries, letters, and journals give readers a first-hand glimpse of the experience of war
• Smith is widely considered America’s leading practitioner of the new and burgeoning field of ‘sensory history’

The Smell of Battle, the Taste of Siege considers how all five senses – sight, sound, smell, taste, and touch – shaped the course, meaning, and content of the Civil War, and explores the impact of the war’s sensory experience on multiple constituencies, including Confederate and Union soldiers and sailors, southern and northern civilians, women, and slaves.

Democracy of Sound
Music Piracy and the Remaking of American Copyright in the Twentieth Century
Alex Sayf Cummings, Georgia State University

Democracy of Sound tells the story of the pirates, radicals, jazzbos, Deadheads, and DJs who challenged the record industry for control of recorded sound throughout the twentieth century. A political and cultural history, it shows how the primacy of ‘intellectual property’ gradually eclipsed an American political tradition that was suspicious of monopolies and favored free competition.

When Life Strikes the President
Scandal, Death, and Illness in the White House
Edited by Jeffrey A. Engel, Southern Methodist University, and Thomas J. Knock, Southern Methodist University

• A new approach to presidential biography, tracing the impact of personal crises, emotional instabilities, illness, and death on presidential decision making and national (and international) outcomes
• Illuminates a considerable chronological span of American history, from the early national period to the early twenty-first century
• Presents an engaging exploration of presidential history by twelve distinguished experts in their fields

Life does not stop simply because someone becomes president. Death, illness, sadness, and scandal affect every president and his family—often during their time in office. Yet the work of the nation and the pressures of the job do not cease simply because a president suffers, though their reaction, suffering, and perseverance often alters the course of American history.

Jane Crow: The Life of Pauli Murray

Rosalind Rosenberg, Barnard College, Columbia University

• Definitive biography of a key figure in the civil rights and women’s movements
• Sensitive exploration of a black person identified at birth as female who believed she was male, before the term transgender existed
• Murray’s legal work was influential in key Supreme Court cases

Euro-African-American activist Paulli Murray was a feminist lawyer, who played pivotal roles in both the modern civil rights and women’s movements. Born in 1910 and identified as female, she believed from childhood she was male. Before there was a social movement to support transgender identity, she devised attacks on all arbitrary distinctions, greatly expanding the idea of equality in the process.

Historically, the Caribbean has been a window on the African diaspora. In the eighteenth century, Cuba and Brazil were the first countries to import African slaves in significant numbers, and slaves and free people of African descent made up the majority of both populations. In the mid-nineteenth century, Cuba and Brazil were also the first countries to experience large-scale slave revolts that resulted in the abolition of slavery.

African Americans. The project is unprecedented in scale, covering the entire Caribbean, and the Afro-descended populations throughout Latin America, including people who spoke and wrote Creole, Dutch, English, French, Portuguese, and Spanish.

Enlightenment project of rethinking what it means to be human, we cannot simply will ourselves to stop using these categories.

Modern Religion, Modern Race
Theodore Vial, IILF School of Theology
Religion is a racialized category, even when race is not explicitly mentioned. Modern Religion, Modern Race argues that because the concepts of religion and race are rooted in the post-Enlightenment project of rethinking what it means to be human, we cannot simply will ourselves to stop using these categories.

- First study of the contribution of summit meetings to the peaceful dénouement of the Cold War
- Analyses the relationships between the superpowers and their views on arms control, explores their triangular relationship with China, and raises the German question
- Offers fascinating insights into key statesman such as Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan, Leonid Brezhnev and Mikhail Gorbachev, Willy Brandt and Helmut Kohl, Zhou Enlai and Deng Xiaoping

This major multinational study, based on archives from both sides of the ‘Iron Curtain’, seeks to understand the role played by international summity in the dénouement of the Cold War, examining the thoughts and actions of key leaders and addressing international relations issues that still shape the world today.

Economies of Europe and North America. Africa are converging on the historically-wealthy economies in Asia, Latin America and even sub-Saharan Africa. This world history of genocide examines the longue durée of mass murder from the beginning of human history to the present. Cases of genocide are examined as distinct episodes of killing, but in connection with earlier episodes. Communist and anti-communist genocides are considered, as are cases of settler (or colonial) genocide.

The Transatlantic Kindergarten

Education and Women’s Movements in Germany and the United States

Ann Taylor Allen, University of Louisville

The kindergarten, which offered an innovative approach to early childhood education, was invented in the German-speaking world and arrived in the United States along with German political exiles in the 1830s. In both the United States and Germany, activist women worked to develop and promote this new form of education. Over the course of three generations they created one of the most successful transnational movements of the nineteenth century. In this book, Ann Taylor Allen presents the first transnational history of the kindergarten as it developed in both Germany and America between 1840 and 1919.

On Pauperism in Present and Past
Jan Brenman, University of Amsterdam
Pauperism and pauperization are two of the most persistent and widespread phenomena in India. While a fierce debate rages on the line separating the poor from the non-poor, there is scant discussion on the huge mass of paupers living in destitution. This book examines poverty and inequality through a sociologicalanthropological lens that goes beyond the quantitative. It fills a conspicuous gap in the literature on casual labour on the floating and footloose transient labour.

King, Governance, and Law in Ancient India

Koulīya’s Arthasastra

Translated with commentary by Patrick Olivelle, University of Texas at Austin

King, Governance, and Law in Ancient India presents an English translation of Koulīya’s Arthasastra (AS) along with detailed endnotes. When it was discovered in 1923, the Arthasastra was described as perhaps the most precious work in the whole range of Sanskrit literature, an assessment that still rings true. This new translation of this significant text, the first in close to half a century takes into account a number of important advances in our knowledge of the texts, inscriptions, and archeological and art historical remains from the period in Indian history to which the AS belongs (2nd/3rd century CE—although parts of it may be much older).

This work brings to light the writings of Sarala Devi, one of the first few women in India to speak for the rights of women. Sarala Devi was also a prolific writer, freedom fighter, activist, and social reformer.

The Life of the Madman of Ú
The Life of the Madman of Ú is a remarkable but little commented on feature of India circulating today is the near total absence of its metaphysical heritage as a source of illumination into our contemporary condition. The central claim of this book is that this heritage has an autonomy of its own that is not subsumable under any other purportedly larger concept; and that furthermore, if we ever hope to break out of our thralldom to the reigning hegemonic – but rather bankrupt – vision of humanities future, we must squarely confront the full consequences of this fateful evasion of the heritage.

China’s Peaceful Rise
Perceptions, Policy and Misperceptions
Christopher Herrick, Muhlenberg College, and Zheya Gai, Washington and Jefferson College
Surain Subramaniam, University of North Carolina at Asheville

Can China peacefully attain great power status in the twenty-first century? Adopting a constructivist approach, the book argues that China’s prospects for achieving great power status peacefully depend more on Chinese and international perceptions of China’s rise development than on concrete measures of power or economic benefits, because power considerations and economic self-interest reflect shifting perceptions that have their roots in factors, such as historical experience and national image.

Remains of Spring
A Naga Village in the No Mans Land
Jibon Krishna Goswami, and Manjeet Baruah, both at Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi

This is a translation of the Assamese novel Aolingar Jui that focuses on life in the village of Hanyat, a small stretch of land that lies on the border area of India and Myanmar. Although it legitimately falls under no political authority, the region experiences constant conflict because multiple political forces try to bring it under their control.

The Nehrus in Prison
S.R. Mehrotra, Hindu College, University of South Carolina
Dinyar Patel, University of South Carolina

• Substantial collection of private papers of Dadabhai Naoroji
• S.R. Mehrotra, an eminent historian
• Detailed introduction

Dadabhai Naoroji (1825–1917), popularly known as the ‘Grand Old Man of India’, was a prominent figure of Indian nationalism. In his public life spanning over six decades, he wrote thousands of letters to political leaders and intellectuals in India, the United Kingdom, and elsewhere, most of which no longer survive. This volume includes many correspondence, collected at the National Archives of India, which open a window to his political career and the broader contours of the early Indian nationalist movement and Victorian politics in Great Britain.

Towards Another Reason
Identity Politics and Ethical Worlds in South India
Ulrich Demmer, Ludwig Maximilians University of Munich

Locating the politics of ethical collective identities in postcolonial South India, this book explores the ways in which different cultural communities forge their self-understandings in terms of practical reason: with respect to ideas of what a good life truly is and how we should live ethically in practice. Drawing upon more than ten years of ethnographic fieldwork, the author discusses the ethical concepts, practices, and politics of the Advaisi community of Jena Kupumna, the state of Tamil Nadu, and the recently established religious discourse of the deity Saneeswara.

Conflict, Negotiation, and Coexistence

Rethinking Human-Elephant Relations in South Asia

Piers Locke and Jane Buckingham, both University of Canterbury, New Zealand

The interconnections between humans and elephants in South Asia are remarkably complex both naturally and culturally, yet our understandings are typically framed in terms of animal ecologies or human histories. This tends to produce understandings that sideline one or the other species. In this book however, social scientists, natural scientists, and humanities scholars come together to develop an integrated approach to understanding the often-problematic ways that humans and elephants exist together and influence each other.

The Killing Wind

A Chinese County’s Descent into Madness during the Cultural Revolution

Tan Hecheng, Journalist and Former Editor in China

Translated by Stacy Mosher, and Guo Jian

• Features research from the ground in Daxian, Mao’s home county and the site of a horrific massacre in 1967
• Historical accuracy coupled with vivid vignettes and interviews
• A meditation on memory, moral culpability, and the failure of the Chinese government in coming to terms with the crimes of the Maoist era

In The Killing Wind, Tan recounts how over the course of 66 days in 1967, over 9,000 Chinese ‘class enemies’ were massacred in the Daxian.

Regime Change in Contemporary Turkey Politics, Rights, Mimesis Necati Polat, Middle East Technical University, Ankara Turkey has undergone a series of upheavals in its political regime from the mid-19th century. This book details the most recent change, locating it in its broader historical setting. Beginning with the Justice and Development Party’s rule from late 2002, supported by a broad informal coalition that included liberals, the book shows how the former Islamists gradually acquired full power between 2007 and 2011.

Zar Spirit Possession, Music, and Healing Rituals in Egypt Hager El Hadidi, University of Richmond Zar is both a possessing spirit and a set of reconciliation rites between the spirits and their human hosts: living in a parallel yet invisible world, the capricious spirits manifest their anger by causing ailments for their hosts, which require ritual reconciliation, a private sacrificial rite practiced routinely by the afflicted devotees.

Recognition in the Arabic Narrative Tradition Discovery, Deliverance and Delusion Philip Kennedy, New York University In this book Philip F. Kennedy shows how ‘recognition’ is key to an understanding of how one reads values and meaning into, or out of, a story. He analyses texts and motifs fundamental to the Arabic literary tradition in five case studies: the Qur’an; the biography of Muhammad; Joseph in classical and medieval re-tellings; the ‘deliverance from adversity’ genre and picaresque narratives.

Violence in Islamic Thought from the Qur’an to the Mongols Edited by Robert Gleave, and István Krisztina-Nagy, both at University of Exeter Violence is understood, widely, to include jihad, state repression and rebellion, and also more personally directed violence against victims (women, animals, children, slaves) and criminals. By understanding the early development of Muslim thinking around violence, our comprehension of subsequent trends in Islamic thought, during the medieval period and up to the modern day, become clearer.

Gaza: A History

Jean-Pierre Filili, Sciences Po in Paris

Jean-Pierre Filili’s book is the first comprehensive history of Gaza in any language. Through its millennium-long existence, Gaza has often been bitterly disputed while simultaneously and paradoxically enduring prolonged neglect. The endurance of Gaza and the Palestinians make the publication of Gaza: A History both timely and significant.

Special Courts and the Repudiation of Republican Egypt

Yoram Meital, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev

Revolutionary Justice narrates the power struggle between the Free Officers and their adversaries in the aftermath of Egypt’s July Revolution of 1952 by studying trials held at the Revolution’s Court and the People’s Court. Meital shows that the rhetoric generated by Egypt’s special courts played a crucial role in the denouement of political struggles, the creation of new historical narratives, and the shaping of both the regime and the opposition’s public image.

Chemical Weapons

Michelle Bentley, Royal Holloway, University of London

The book challenges the argument that a chemical weapons taboo is ‘good’ and demonstrates it may exacerbate conflict.

Becoming Ottomans
Sephardi Jews and Imperial Citizenship in the Modern Era
Julia Phillips Cohen, Vanderbilt University

Becoming Ottomans is the first book to tell the story of Jewish political integration into a modern Islamic empire. It follows the efforts of Sephardi Jews from Salonica to Izmir to Istanbul to become citizens of their state during the final half century of the Ottoman Empire’s existence.

Islamisation
Comparative Perspectives from History
Edited by A. C. S. Peacock, St Andrews University

The spread of Islam and the process of Islamisation has attracted the attention of scholars working on many diverse parts of the Islamic world. However, such research has often been carried out in isolation, and our understanding of these major historical phenomena remains quite rudimentary. This volume aims to address this lacuna by providing this comparative perspective through studies of Islamisation that address both its historical trajectory and the methodological problems in its study from across the Islamic world, from Africa to China, from the 7th century until c. 1800.

Fictitious Capital
Silk, Cotton, and the Rise of the Arabic Novel
Elizabeth Holt, Bard College

The ups and downs of silk, cotton and stocks synthopted with serialized novels in the late nineteenth-century Arabic press; time itself was changing. Khalil al-Khuri, Salim al-Bustani, and Jurji Zaydan wrote novels of debt, dissimulation, and risk, increasingly legible as tools of French and British empire.
