Oxford Bibliographies in Linguistics is a sophisticated online recommendation service that provides you with original scholarly content used and trusted by professional researchers worldwide. Peer reviewed, regularly updated, and constantly expanding, our database provides an authoritative guide to the current scholarship in this field, with original commentary and annotations by top scholars. With Oxford Bibliographies in Linguistics, the expert knowledge you need to start your next research project is right at your fingertips.

Scholarly Research Reviews

Oxford Handbooks Online in linguistics brings together the world’s leading scholars to write review essays that evaluate the current thinking on a field or topic, and make an original argument about the future direction of the debate. Articles review the key issues, reveal original arguments and concepts, and set the agenda for new research. The books have become one of the most successful and cited series within scholarly publishing, and the entire collection of work across 15 subject areas is available on Oxford Handbooks Online.

Delivering the best scholarly publishing from leading university presses around the world

University Press Scholarship Online (UPSO) makes disparately-published works easily accessible and fully cross-searchable on one single, state-of-the-art online platform. With titles from Oxford, Edinburgh, MIT presses and more, the Linguistics module on UPSO has strengths in many areas of the field, such as: Sociolinguistics/Anthropological Studies, Applied Linguistics, Lexicography, Phonetics/Phonology, and Syntax and Morphology.

Quick and easy access to award-winning scholarship

Oxford Scholarship Online (OSO) is a vast and rapidly expanding cross-searchable library which offers quick and easy access to thousands of OUP books. Linguistics focuses on all fields of theoretical and historical linguistics and has extensive lists in linguistic typology, language evolution, and language in culture and society. We are especially interested in work at the interface between linguistics and cognate fields, such as psychology, anthropology, and philosophy.

Reference Reimagined
A digital reference project in development, led by Editor in Chief, Mark Aronoff, State University of New York

The Oxford Research Encyclopedia of Linguistics (ORE) is part of a major initiative from Oxford University Press to transform its approach to reference publishing in order to better serve the changing needs of university-level digital research.

Updated monthly, the ORE of Linguistics features peer-reviewed articles that combine the discoverability of digital with the standards of academic publishing. Editor in Chief Mark Aronoff and an editorial board of subject experts will ensure comprehensive coverage of the field.

The ORE of Linguistics is currently freely available as scholarly articles are gradually added to the site.

Africa’s Endangered Languages

Documentary and Theoretical Approaches

Edited by Jason Kandybowicz, The Graduate Center, City University of New York, and Harold Torrence, University of California, Los Angeles

Africa’s Endangered Languages examines the endangered languages of Africa from both documentary and theoretical perspectives, highlighting the threats of extinction many of them face and the challenges and implications each bring to bear on linguistic theory. It focuses on the symbiosis between documentary and theoretical methodologies, and its consequences for the preservation of endangered languages, both in the African context and more broadly.

The Oxford Handbook of Derivational Morphology
Edited by Rochelle Lieber, University of New Hampshire, and Pavol Stekauer, P.J. Safárik University

The Oxford Handbook of Derivational Morphology provides a comprehensive and thorough overview of the study of derivational morphology. Chapters cover theoretical and definitional matters, formal and semantic issues, interdisciplinary connections, and detailed descriptions of derivational processes in a wide range of language families.

Measuring Grammatical Complexity
Edited by Frederick J. Newmeyer, and Laurel B. Preston, both at University of Washington

Measuring Grammatical Complexity examines the question of whether languages can differ in grammatical complexity and, if so, how relative complexity differences might be measured. Chapters approach the question from the point of view of formal grammatical theory, psycholinguistics, and neurolinguistics, and take phonology, morphology, syntax, and semantics into account.

Multiple Exponence
Alice C. Harris, University of Massachusetts Amherst

Multiple exponence (ME) is the occurrence of multiple realizations of a single morphosyntactic feature within a word. The four most commonly encountered types of ME are characterized, and these form the basis for discussion of processing of ME, acquisition of ME, historical development of ME, and analysis of ME.

Making Sense
The Glamorous Story of English Grammar

David Crystal,
University of Wales, Bangor

World-renowned linguist David Crystal rids grammar of its undeserved reputation as a dry yet intimidating subject. Grammar poses a special challenge because of a centuries-old history of educational practice that taught the ‘how’ but not the ‘why’ of grammar. He confronts these basic yet unaddressed questions to render surprising answers: where did grammar come from? Why is it needed? What is its value? How should it be taught - and tested? And where on earth can glamour lie in all of this? The more we understand about where our grammar comes from, Crystal persuades us, the more sense it will make to us, and the more sense we will make.

Defaults in Morphological Theory

Edited by Nikolas Gisborne,
University of Edinburgh,
and Andrew Hippisley,
University of Kentucky

 Defaults in Morphological Theory sets out four different default-based frameworks for describing morphology. Major proponents of these frameworks address a range of questions about the role of defaults in the lexicon, such as the place of morphology in the grammar and the challenge of meaning-form dissociations that plagues morphology.

The Verbal Domain

Edited by
Roberta D’Alessandro,
Utrecht Institute of Linguistics OTS, Irene Franco, Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main, and Ángel J. Gallego, Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona

- Examines data from a range of languages, including French, Greek, Tamil, and Pazar Laz
- Includes the latest research on the most widely-debated topics regarding the verbal domain
- Focuses on issues relating to the interfaces between syntax and morphology

This volume features cutting-edge research from leading authorities on the nature and structure of the verbal domain and the complexity of the Verb Phrase. Its three parts represent the areas in which contemporary debate on the verbal domain is most active.

Optimality Theoretic Syntax, Semantics, and Pragmatics

From Uni- to Bidirectional Optimization

Edited by Géraldine Legendre, Johns Hopkins University, Michael T. Putnam, Penn State University, Henríette de Swart, Utrecht University, and Erin Zaroukian, Optimality Theoretic Syntax, Semantics, and Pragmatics investigates the morphosyntactic, semantic, and pragmatic properties of language, and the interactions between them, from the perspective of Optimality Theory. It integrates optimization processes into the formal and functional study of grammar, interpreting optimization as the result of conflicting, violable ranked constraints.

The Structure of Words at the Interfaces

Edited by Heather Newell, Université du Québec à Montréal, Máire Noonan, Glyne Piggott, and Lisa deMena Travis, all at McGill University

The Structure of Words at the Interfaces takes a variety of approaches to the question 'what is a word?', with particular emphasis on where in the grammar wordhood is determined. The study of the interface between the syntactic and phonological modules of Universal Grammar underpins the discussion in this volume.

What exactly are words? Are they the things that get listed in dictionaries, or are they the basic units of sentence structure? Andrew Carstairs-McCarthy explores the implications of these different approaches to words in English. He explains the various ways in which words are related to one another, and shows how the history of the English language has affected word structure.

An Introduction to English Morphology

Nominal Contact in Michif

Carrie Gillon and Nicole Rosen, both at University of Manitoba

Nominal Contact in Michif explores the results of language contact in Michif, traditionally considered a mixed language that combines a French noun phrase with a Cree verb phrase. The authors show that contact does not create a whole new language category and that Michif should instead be considered an Algonquian language with French contact influence.

Person, Case, and Agreement

The Morphosyntax of Inverse Agreement and Global Case Splits

András Bárány, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London

Person, Case, and Agreement provides both language-specific and cross-linguistic comparative analyses of phenomena relating to person, case and case-marking, and agreement. The book combines data from eight different language families with theory and explicit analyses, and will be of interest to both formal and data-oriented linguists and typologists alike.

Analyzing Syntax through Texts

Old, Middle, and Early Modern English

Elly van Gelderen, Arizona State University

Analyzing Syntax through Texts invites the student to explore early English syntax by looking at the linguistic characteristics of well-known texts throughout the early history of English. It shows how that piece of the language fits in to the broader picture of how English is developing and introduces the student to the real writing of the period.

Verb Movement in Romance

A Comparative Study

Norma Schifano, University of Cambridge

Verb Movement in Romance provides a detailed account of verb movement across more than twenty standard and non-standard Romance varieties. Norma Schifano uses extensive empirical data to demonstrate that, contrary to traditional assumptions, it is possible to identify at least four distinct macro-typologies of verb movement in the Romance languages.

-null subjects in generative grammar

A Synchronic and Diachronic Perspective

Edited by Federica Cognola, and Jan Casalicchio, both at University of Trento

Null Subjects in Generative Grammar considers the null-subject phenomenon, whereby some languages lack an overtly realized referential subject in specific contexts. It explores novel empirical data and new theoretical analyses covering the major approaches to null subjects in generative grammar, and examines a wide range of languages from different families.

Modern Scots

An Analytical Survey

Robert McColl Millar, University of Aberdeen

This textbook overview of Modern Scots provides a description and analysis of the language covering lexical, phonological and structural patterns. It presents evidence for the diversity of the language through illustrations from newly collected fieldwork material. Frequent, detailed analysis of local variation is combined with a central focus is on the overall patterning of Scots. McColl Millar also examines the present and future of Scots, considering both its use in literature and other media and ongoing language policy and planning.

The Lexical Semantics of the Arabic Verb

Peter John Glanville, University of Maryland, College Park

- Includes extensive data from corpora, literary works, and the internet
- Examines contemporary and historic data to demonstrate changes in meaning over time
- Provides clearly laid out explanations and diagrams of complex phenomena

This book explores Arabic derivational morphology, focusing on the relationship between verb meaning and linguistic forms from a lexical semantic perspective. It explains why verbs with seemingly unrelated meanings share the same phonological shape, and analyses sets of words containing the same consonantal root to arrive at a common abstraction.

OXFORD SURVEYS IN SEMANTICS AND PRAGMATICS

Questions
Veneeta Dayal, Rutgers University

- Each chapter provides a non-technical introduction and a conclusion summarizing key points
- Includes coverage of topics that are currently under debate, with pointers on possible future lines of research
- Written in an accessible style, to appeal to a wide range of readers

This book synthesizes and integrates 40 years of research on the semantics of questions, and its interface with pragmatics and syntax. It will be a unique resource for the novice and expert alike, and seeks to appeal to a variety of readers without compromising depth and breadth of coverage.

Gradability in Natural Language
Logical and Grammatical Foundations
Heather Burnett, Laboratoire de Linguistique Formelle, CNRS-Université Paris 7-Denis Diderot
This book presents a new theory of the relationship between vagueness, context-sensitivity, gradability, and scale structure in natural language. Heather Burnett proposes a new formal reasoning system called DelTCS in which she sets out a completely new theory of gradable linguistic constructions.

The Semantics of Evidentials
Sarah E. Murray, Cornell University
- Based on extensive empirical data, much of it from the author’s own fieldwork on Cheyenne
- Adopts a crosslinguistic approach to the semantics of evidentiality
- Outlines how the proposed theory can be extended to other phenomena

This book provides a compositional, truth-conditional, crosslinguistic semantics for evidentiality, the linguistic encoding of the source information on which a statement is based. The new proposal is based on extensive data from Cheyenne, English, and a variety of other languages.

Proper Names
A Millian Account
Stefano Predelli
University of Nottingham
Stefano Predelli defends a semantics of proper names which has simplicity and common sense in its favour: proper names are non-indexical devices of rigid and direct reference. He grounds this view in accounts of the shape and form of names, and of their introduction within language use, and he responds to widespread misconceptions and objections.

Act-Based Conceptions of Propositional Content
Contemporary and Historical Perspectives
Edited by Friederike Moltmann, French Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique and New York University, and Mark Textor, King’s College London
The notion of a propositional content plays a central role in contemporary philosophy of language. While the Fregean conception of propositions as mind-independent objects has dominated analytic philosophy, a number of philosophers have approached the notion of a propositional content instead by focusing on cognitive acts. The volume presents a central selection of historical work and a range of new work within that perspective.

Concealed Questions
Ilaria Frana, University of Enna Kore

- Presents a broad analysis of the semantics, syntax, and pragmatics of concealed questions
- Provides a clear and detailed analysis of the formal theory adopted
- Offers insights into a range of topics in semantic theory and relating to the syntax-semantics interface

This book presents a new analysis of concealed-question constructions, in which part of a sentence looks like a nominal complement but is interpreted as an indirect question. It provides a fully compositional account of a range of these constructions and offers insights into a variety of issues in semantic theory and the syntax-semantics interface.

Parts of a Whole
Distributivity as a Bridge between Aspect and Measurement
Lucas Champollion, New York University

- Provides a clear and concise overview of existing work and relevant theoretical approaches
- Offers a unified account of three semantic domains that are usually studied separately
- Proposes an elegant new approach to the semantics of distributivity, aspect, and measurement

This book uses mathematical models of language to explain why there are certain gaps in language: things that we might expect to be able to say but can’t. Lucas Champollion offers a theory that unifies the concepts of aspect, plural and mass reference, measurement, and distributivity, to account for these gaps.

The Grammar of Expressivity
Daniel Gutzmann, University of Cologne
This volume examines the behaviour of utterances known as expressives, such as ouch! Unlike most previous studies, this book proposes that syntax plays an important role in expressivity, and that only through acknowledging the roles of both semantics and syntax can the idiosyncratic behaviours of these expressive elements be fully explained.

The Management of Meaning

Vincent L. Wimbush, Claremont Graduate University

In this book Vincent Wimbush seeks to problematize what we call “scriptures,” a word first used to refer simply to “things written,” the registration of basic information. In the modern world the word came to be associated almost exclusively with the center-and power-defining “sacred” texts of “world religions.” Wimbush argues that this narrowing of the valence of the term was a decisive development for western culture.

Mood, Aspect, Modality Revisited

New Answers to Old Questions

Edited by Joanna Blaszcza, University of Wroclaw, Anastasia Giannakidou, University of Chicago, Dorota Klimek-Jankowska, and Krzysztof Migdalski, both at University of Wroclaw

Over the past several decades, linguistic theorizing of tense, aspect, and mood (TAM), along with a strongly growing body of crosslinguistic studies, has revealed complexity in the data that challenges traditional distinctions and treatments of these categories. Mood, Aspect, Modality Revisited argues that it’s time to revisit our conventional assumptions and reconsider our foundational questions: What exactly is a linguistic category? What kinds of categories do labels such as “subjunctive,” “imperative,” “future,” and “modality” truly refer to? In short, how categorical are categories?

Conjoining Meanings

Semantics Without Truth Values

Paul M. Pietroski, Rutgers University

Paul M. Pietroski presents an ambitious new account of human languages as generative procedures that respect substantive constraints. He argues that meanings are neither concepts nor extensions, and sentences do not have truth conditions; meanings are composable instructions for how to access and assemble concepts of a special sort.

Wylie Breckenridge, Charles Sturt University

Wylie Breckenridge offers a fresh understanding of the character of visual experience by deploying the methods of semantics. He develops a theory of what we mean by the ‘look’ sentences that we use to describe our visual experiences, and on that basis develops a theory of what it is to have a visual experience with a certain character.

The Story of Be
A Verb’s-Eye View of the English Language
David Crystal, University of Wales, Bangor

It's the most simple, unassuming, innocent-looking verb: 'to be'. Yet it is jam-packed with more different meanings, forms, and uses than any other English word. As he reveals be's multiple incarnations, David Crystal takes us to the heart of our flexible and changing language, with the help of wonderfully entertaining examples and cartoons.

Approaches to Teaching the History of the English Language
Pedagogy in Practice
Edited by Mary Hayes and Allison Burkette, both at University of Mississippi

The History of the English Language is a traditional course whose instructors are tasked with balancing various institutional, curricular, and student needs. Additionally, the course’s prodigious subject poses challenges for new as well as veteran instructors. It encompasses a broad chronological, geographic, and disciplinary scope and, in the twenty-first-century classroom, has come to account for English’s transformative relationship with the internet and social media. In Approaches to Teaching the History of the English Language, experienced instructors explain the influences and ingenuity behind their successful teaching practices.

Style, Mediation, and Change
Sociolinguistic Perspectives on Talking Media
Edited by Janus Mortensen, Nikolai Coupland, and Jacob Thogersen, all at University of Copenhagen

• Offers a coherent view of style as a unifying concept for the sociolinguistics of talking media
• Promotes an integrative view of mediated interaction, drawing linguistic, paralinguistic and visual dimensions of meaning into the same frame of reference
• Brings together new sociolinguistic studies of media discourse by leading international researchers

Mediated talk is organised around familiar styles - styles of person, relationship and genre. But media also consistently remake and re-style these familiar patterns. This book brings together original research of media styling in different national contexts and languages. It highlights and theorises how creative acts of mediated styling can promote social and sociolinguistic change.

Distributed Agency
Edited by N. J. Enfield, University of Sydney, Australia, and Paul Kockelman, Yale University

Distributed Agency presents an interdisciplinary inroad into the latest thinking about the distributed nature of agency: what it's like, what are its conditions of possibility, and what are its consequences. The book's 25 chapters are written by a wide range of scholars, from anthropology, biology, cognitive science, linguistics, philosophy, psychology, geography, law, economics, and sociology. While each chapter takes up different materials using different methods, they all chart relations between the key elements of agency: intentionality, causality, flexibility and accountability.

Public Debate in Russia

Matters of Disorder

Edited by Nikolai Vakhtin and Boris Firsov, Both at European University, St Petersburg

The first book to offer a detailed exploration of the condition of public debate in Russia, this pioneering volume presents a truly interdisciplinary perspective on Russian language and society. Offering detailed case studies of the past and present communicative successes and failures in various social groups, the contributors explore why Russian society is unable to reach a consensus through dialogue.

Language, Gender, and Gay Male Subcultures

Rusty Barrett, University of Kentucky

- A previously unpublished study, this book offers the first look at language in gay subcultures
- Examines complex issues surrounding gay rights, public health, and barebacking, among other topics
- Subcultures examined include radical faeries, drag queens, bears, circuit boys, barebackers, and leathermen

From Drag Queens to Leathermen examines gendered language in six gay male subcultures: drag queens, radical faeries, bears, circuit boys, barebackers, and leathermen. The chapters include ethnographic-based studies of language use in each of these subcultures, with special attention to the ways in which linguistic patterns challenge normative assumptions about gender and sexuality.

The Discourse of News Values

How News Organizations Create Newsworthiness

Monika Bednarek, The University of Sydney, and Helen Caple, The University of New South Wales

The Discourse of News Values breaks new ground in multimodal news discourse, offering the first book-length treatment of the discursive analysis of news values and the construction of newsworthiness. The book explores how the news is “sold” (made newsworthy) to audiences through the semiotic resources of language and image, providing a new analytical framework which can be used by other researchers in their own subsequent studies.

Deceptive Ambiguity by Police and Prosecutors
Roger W. Shuy, Georgetown University

Ambiguity is commonly considered unintentional while deception is considered intentional. Here, Roger W. Shuy describes fifteen criminal cases in which police, prosecutors, and undercover agents used deceptive ambiguity with criminal suspects and defendants, many times giving evidence of being intentionally constructed through the manipulation of the speech events, schemas, agendas, speech acts, strategies, lexicon, and grammar. Although certain types of intentional deceptive ambiguity are central for successful undercover operations, the case examples in this book demonstrate how various types of deceptive ambiguity are common not only in undercover operations but also in police interviews and courtroom examinations conducted by prosecutors.

A Multilingual Nation
Translation and Language Dynamic in India
Edited by Rita Kothari, IIT Gandhinagar, India

- A comprehensive work in the field of Translation Studies in the Indian context, linking language politics to translation
- Renowned scholars have contributed to this volume

An unusual and unorthodox anthology of essays by leading thinkers and writers, new and young researchers, A Multilingual Nation: Translation and Language Dynamics in India will not let us go back to thinking about translation and language quite the same way. Is there only one Hindi, one Marathi, and is it even possible to comfortably suggest that there is one source language? Shaking the institution of both language and translation, this anthology overturns the principles of translation in the West, and provocatively argues that translation is not a ‘solution’ to the allegedly chaotic situation of many languages, rather its inherent and inalienable part.

Scribal Repertoires in Egypt from the New Kingdom to the Early Islamic Period
Edited by Jennifer Cromwell, University of Copenhagen, and Eitan Grossman, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem

Scribal Repertoires in Egypt from the New Kingdom to the Early Islamic Period reconceptualizes scribal variation in pre-modern Egypt from the perspective of contemporary historical sociolinguistics, as a rich source for understanding the scribes’ complex socio-cultural environments. A series of case studies applies this framework to scribal variation spanning thousands of years, from Pharaonic to Islamic Egypt.

Borrowing
Loanwords in the Speech Community and in the Grammar
Shana Poplack, University of Ottawa

Borrowing focuses on the process of lexical borrowing: how bilinguals introduce and adapt foreign items into recipient-language grammatical structure; how these forms diffuse across speakers and communities; how long they persist in real time; and whether they change over the duration. Building on more than three decades of original research, Shana Poplack demystifies the phenomenon of borrowing as practiced by bilinguals in the context of their speech communities.

The Place of Words
The Académie Française and Its Dictionary during an Age of Revolution
Michael P. Fitzsimmons, Auburn University at Montgomery

A Place of Words examines the fifth and most controversial edition of the dictionary of the Académie Française, published in 1798 and spanning several regimes before the publication of the sixth in 1835. Full of anachronisms and appearing to slight the French Revolution, from the outset the edition received much judgement and critique. Under the Consulate, the government used it as an instrument to assert control over the language. As the first book-length study of this controversial fifth edition, A Place of Words offers insights into the Revolution and Napoleonic periods neglected in previous scholarship.

Linguistic Typology
Jae Jung Song, University of Otago

- Offers an up-to-date critical discussion of key theoretical concepts and methodological issues
- Draws on data from a wide range of diverse languages
- Each chapter includes study questions and suggestions for further reading

This textbook provides a critical introduction to major research topics and current approaches in linguistic typology. It draws on a wide range of cross-linguistic data to describe what linguistic typology has revealed about language in general and about the rich variety of ways in which meaning and expression are achieved in the world’s languages.

- Contains extensive anecdotes and details of unusual linguistic phenomena from a range of languages
- Offers an entertaining and controversial perspective on whether one language can be considered better than another

This book sets out to answer a question that many linguists have been hesitant to ask: are some languages better than others? Written in the author’s usual accessible and engaging style, the book outlines the essential and optional features of language, before concluding that the ideal language does not and probably never will exist.

Non-Canonical Gender Systems
Edited by Sebastian Fedden, Université Paris 3 (Sorbonne Nouvelle), Jenny Audring, Leiden University, and Greville G. Corbett, University of Surrey

Non-Canonical Gender Systems explores the boundaries of the category of gender and their theoretical significance within the framework of Canonical Typology. International experts analyse a variety of gender systems from a range of typologically diverse languages from across the world, from South America to Melanesia, and from Central Italy to Northern Australia.

Grammaticalization from a Typological Perspective
Edited by Heiko Narrog, Tohoku University, and Bernd Heine, University of Cologne

Grammaticalization from a Typological Perspective explores how grammaticalization has developed in typologically different languages. Until recently our knowledge of the grammaticalization process has centred on European languages. In this volume, internationally renowned scholars present studies of languages spoken in areas such as Southeast Asia, Africa, Amazonia, and Australia.

The essays in this volume address a core question regarding the structure of linguistic systems: how much access do the grammatical components - syntax, morphology and phonology - have to each other?

The Phonology of Chichewa
Laura J. Downing, University of Gothenburg, and Al Mtenje, University of Malawi
- Provides extensive data to illustrate a range of phonological phenomena
- Adopts an accessible and theory-neutral approach
- Addresses issues in the phonology-morphology and phonology-syntax interfaces

This book provides thorough descriptive and atheoretical coverage of the full range of phonological phenomena of Chichewa, a Malawian Bantu language. It covers topics such as vowel harmony, nasal place assimilation, postnasal laryngeal alternations, tonal phenomena, prosodic morphology, and the phonology-syntax interface.

The Morphosyntax-Phonology Connection
Locality and Directionality at the Interface
Edited by Vera Gribanova, Stanford University, and Stephanie S. Shih, University of California, Merced

Recursion
A Computational Investigation into the Representation and Processing of Language
David J. Lobina,
University of Barcelona
Recursion examines one of the most contested topics in linguistics and cognitive science: the role of recursion in language. It offers a precise account of what recursion is, what role it should play in cognitive theories of human knowledge, and how it manifests itself in the mental representations of language and other cognitive domains.

Beyond Concepts
Unicents, Language, and Natural Information
Ruth Garrett Millikan,
University of Connecticut
Ruth Garrett Millikan presents a strikingly original account of how we get to grips with the world in thought. Her question is Kant’s ‘How is knowledge possible?’, answered from a contemporary naturalist standpoint. We begin with an understanding of what the world is like prior to cognition, then develop a theory of cognition within that world.

COLOUR TWO

PRAGMATICS

Cognition and Communication in the Evolution of Language

Anne Reboul, Institute for Cognitive Sciences-Marc Jeannerod, CNRS and University UCBL-Lyon 1

This book shows that language, though now routinely used for communication, actually primarily evolved as a system for thought. Anne Reboul proposes a new two-step approach whereby syntax first evolved as a language of thought, which was then externalized for communication due to social selection pressures.

The Oxford Handbook of Lying

Edited by Jörg Meibauer, Johannes Gutenberg University, Mainz

The Oxford Handbook of Lying is the first to incorporate the linguistic background of lying (semantic, lexical, prosodic, discourse-related, developmental, and intercultural features of lying) with a number of other disciplines, especially the philosophy of language, psychology, and psycholinguistics. Chapters cover all the standard topics in lying research, as well as less studied areas such as computer-mediated discourse, and lying in different cultures. The volume also contributes to more practical and applied aspects of lying research. It asks, for example: How can lying be detected? Is lying always bad? What are the motives for lying? Do defendants have to have a right to lie? Throughout the handbook, examples of actual lying behaviour are integrated for theoretical analysis and discussion. It will be of interest to scholars and students in linguistics, psychology, philosophy, and communication science.

The Monologic Imagination
Edited by Matt Tomlinson, The Australian National University in Canberra, and Julian Millie, Monash University

- The volume sets a course for future research-pioneering an argument about the force of monologue in political and religious speech
- Explores the interplay between monologism and dialogism
- Presents vivid ethnographic case studies come from a wide range of societies: the United States, Iran, Cuba, Indonesia, Algeria, and Papua New Guinea

The pioneering work of Bakhtin has led scholars to see all discourse as “dialogical.” Contributors to this volume argue that something is overlooked with this focus. Many speakers, especially in political and religious contexts, craft monologues-single-voiced statements to which the only expected response is agreement or faithful replication.

Looking like a Language, Sounding like a Race
Jonathan Rosa, Stanford University

Looking like a Language, Sounding like a Race examines the emergence of linguistic and ethnoracial categories in contemporary U.S. constructions of Latinidad. The book draws from long-term ethnographic research in a Chicago high school and its surrounding communities to analyze the creation and contestation of political, ethnoracial, and linguistic borders.

Relative Clauses in Synchrony and Diachrony
Adriana Cardoso, University of Lisbon

This book explores language variation and change from the perspective of generative syntax, based on a case study of relative clauses in Portuguese and other languages. It offers a comparative account of three linguistic phenomena in the synchrony and diachrony of Portuguese and an overview of competing theoretical analyses.

Gender from Latin to Romance
History, Geography, Typology
Michele Loporcaro, University of Zurich

Quantitative Historical Linguistics
A Corpus Framework
Gard B. Jenset, and Barbara McGillivray, University of Cambridge

This book outlines a new framework for quantitatively assessing models and hypotheses in historical linguistics. It offers an in-depth explanation and discussion of the benefits of working with quantitative methods, corpus data, and corpus annotation, and the advantages of open and reproducible research.

Clause Structure and Word Order in the History of German
Edited by Agnes Jäger, University of Cologne, Gisella Ferraresi, University of Bamberg, and Helmut Weiß, University of Frankfurt

This volume presents the first comprehensive generative account of the historical syntax of German. Leading scholars in the field survey a range of topics and offer new insights into multiple central aspects of clause structure and word order, including verb placement, adverbial connectives, pronominal syntax, and information-structural factors.

Language and Character in Euripides’ Electra

Evert van Emde Boas, Calleva Research Centre, Magdalen College, University of Oxford

This study of Euripides’ Electra marries linguistics and literary criticism to provide novel insights into the interpretation of the play. Focusing on characterization, it demonstrates how the figures are shaped through their use of language, using new means of analysis to argue for a balanced interpretation and challenge prevailing views.

Orality and Performance in Classical Attic Prose

A Linguistic Approach

Alessandro Vatri, Wolfson College, University of Oxford

This study discusses whether there is a linguistic difference between classical Attic prose texts intended for public oral delivery and those intended for written circulation and private performance, establishing a rigorous methodology for the reconstruction of the native perception of clarity in the original contexts of textual reception.

Motion and the English Verb
A Diachronic Study
Judith Huber, Institut fuer Englische Philologie
• Offers the first comprehensive account of motion encoding in early English
• Provides a diachronic contribution to the typology of motion encoding with a focus on intertypological language contact of Middle English and Anglo-French
• Analyzes the process of borrowing and integration of French path verbs in Middle English

Motion and the English Verb offers an extensive study of motion encoding in medieval English, including an investigation of the range of verbs occurring in the medieval English intransitive motion construction and an analysis of which verbs and structures are employed most frequently in talking about motion. On this basis, it analyses the various cognitive and contact-linguistic aspects of the integration of “typologically different” French loan verbs expressing path of motion.

Where Metaphors Come From
Reconsidering Context in Metaphor
Zoltán Kövecses, Eötvös Lorand University

- Recasts cognitive metaphor theory, as a contextual theory of metaphor, expanding and refining it to account for the ways in which many verbal metaphors are tied to context.
- Blends psychological and linguistic theories of how context affects language use and meaning with the author’s own significant work on the experiential and contextual forces that lead to metaphorical expressions in discourse.
- Shows how appeals to universal embodiment in metaphor theory are not necessarily opposed to contextualist views of metaphor.

Kövecses recasts CMT as a contextual theory of metaphor, expanding and refining it to account for the ways in which many verbal metaphors are tied to context.

Selected Essays

Brian Loar

Edited by Katalin Balo, Rutgers University, and Stephanie Beardman, New York University

- A collection of the best essays of this eminent philosopher
- Essays are collected into two distinct sections, focusing on philosophy of mind and philosophy of language
- Focuses on one of the most important problems in analytic philosophy - the place of the mind in a physical universe

One of the most important problems of modern philosophy concerns the place of subjectivity in a purely physical universe. Brian Loar was a major contributor to the discussion of this problem for over four decades. This volume brings together his most important and influential essays in the philosophy of language and of mind.

Vagueness and Law

Philosophical and Legal Perspectives

Edited by Geert Keil, Humboldt University Berlin, and Ralf Poscher, Albert-Ludwigs-University of Freiburg

Bringing together leading scholars working on the topic of vagueness in philosophy and in law, this book fosters a dialogue between philosophers and legal scholars by examining how philosophers conceive vagueness in law from their theoretical perspective and how legal theorists make use of philosophical theories of vagueness.

Mental Files in Flux

François Recanati, Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS)

François Recanati has pioneered the ‘mental file’ framework for thinking about concepts and how we refer to the world in thought and language. He now explores what happens to mental files in a dynamic setting: Recanati argues that communication involves interpersonal dynamic files.

Semantics, Metasemantics, Aboutness

Ori Simchen, University of British Columbia

Semantics aims to describe the significance of linguistic expressions in a systematic way. Metasemantics, or foundational semantics, asks how expressions gain their significance in the first place. Ori Simchen presents the first book-length treatment of metasemantics and its relation to the thriving research program of truth-conditional semantics.

Choosing Normative Concepts
Matti Eklund
Uppsala University
The concepts we use to value and prescribe (concepts like good, right, ought) are historically contingent, and we could have found ourselves with others. But what does it mean to say that some concepts are better than others for purposes of action-guiding and deliberation? What is it to choose between different normative conceptual frameworks?

Contextualising Knowledge
Epistemology and Semantics
Jonathan Jenkins Ichikawa
University of British Columbia
Jonathan Ichikawa synthesizes two prominent ideas in epistemology: contextualism about knowledge ascriptions, and the ‘knowledge first’ emphasis on the theoretical primacy of knowledge. He argues that in thinking clearly about knowledge, epistemologists must also think about the dynamic aspects of the words we use to talk about knowledge.

What is Rhetoric?
Michel Meyer
Université Libre de Bruxelles
What is Rhetoric? offers a new unified approach to rhetoric, a means of persuading or influencing interlocutors. All the principal authors from Plato and Aristotle to contemporary theorists are integrated into Michel Meyer’s ‘problematological’ conception of rhetoric, based on the primacy of questioning and answering in language and thought.

Language and the Structure of Berkeley’s World
Kenneth L. Pearce
Trinity College, Dublin
George Berkeley (1685-1753) was an Anglo-Irish bishop, considered among the great philosophers of early modern Europe. Pearce develops a new interpretation of Berkeley’s philosophy which emphasizes the importance of Berkeley’s revolutionary theory of language and shows that Berkeley has greater relevance to current philosophy than has been thought.

Reflections on the Liar
Edited by Bradley Armour-Garb, University of Albany
There are a number of people who do great work in philosophy who have said very little about the Liar paradox. The purpose of this volume is to afford those philosophers the opportunity to address what might be described as reflections on the Liar.

Ontology Without Borders
Jody Azzouni, Tufts University
Our experience of objects is very rich. We perceive objects as possessing individuation conditions. This, however, is a projection of our senses and thinking. Azzouni shows the resulting austere metaphysics tames many ancient philosophical problems about constitution (“Ship of Theseus” “Sorities”), as well as contemporary puzzles about reductionism.

The Boundary Stones of Thought
An Essay in the Philosophy of Logic
Ian Rumfitt, University of Oxford
Classical logic has been attacked by adherents of rival, anti-realist logical systems: Ian Rumfitt comes to its defence. He considers the nature of logic, and how to arbitrate between different logics. He argues that classical logic may dispense with the principle of bivalence, and may thus be liberated from the dead hand of classical semantics.

Living Words
Meaning Underdetermination and the Dynamic Lexicon
Peter Ludlow, Northwestern University
Peter Ludlow shows how word meanings are much more dynamic than we might have supposed, and explores how they are modulated even during everyday conversation. The resulting view is radical, and has far-reaching consequences for our political and legal discourse, and for enduring puzzles in the foundations of semantics, epistemology, and logic.

Legal Integration and Language Diversity

Rethinking Translation in EU Lawmaking

C.J.W. Baaij, Yale University

The European pursuit for legal integration and language diversity poses a puzzling question: how can the EU create uniform laws in 24 official languages successfully? This book argues that the answer lies in elevating the English language version, and seeking literalism over fluency in aligning the other language versions.

Translation as Citation

Zhuangzi Inside Out

Haun Saussy, University of Chicago

Translation as Citation looks at translation from many angles: it explores how translations change the languages in which they occur, how works introduced from other languages become part of the consciousness of native speakers, what strategies translators must use to secure acceptance for foreign works, and the history of translation in China.
