Development or Jihad
Serge Michaeloff. Institut de Relations Internationales et Stratégiques

The mass unemployment of young people, far more than jihadist propaganda, is the primary explanation for the dramatic collapse of Afghanistan. Despite major differences in geography and culture, there are huge similarities between the Sahel and Afghanistan: a demographic impasse, stagnating agriculture, widespread rural misery, high unemployment, deep ethnic and religious fault lines, weak states, regional instability, drug trafficking, and the spread of radical Islam.

What Everyone Needs to Know®
John Campbell, Council on Foreign Relations, and Matthew T. Page, Centre for Democracy and Development

- Provides a comprehensive overview of the post-independent social and political climate in Nigeria
- Addresses key questions regarding Nigeria’s recent history, politics, culture, religion, and economic development, and future trends such as urbanization and climate change
- Clearly examines pervasive security, economic, and political challenges

Nigeria is one of the most important democracies in the world, but scarcely examined. With its continent-wide influence in a host of areas, Nigeria’s success as a democracy is in the fundamental interest of its African neighbors, the United States, and the international community. This volume provides interested readers with an accessible overview of essential questions related to widening inequality stemming from Nigeria’s oil wealth, Nigeria’s historic 2015 presidential election, the persistent security threat of Boko Haram, Nigeria’s subsapar human rights and corruption records, and the continual conflicts that arise in a country that is demographically half Christian and half Muslim.

Yeh Darakti Zameen
Bharat ka Paristhitik Itihas
Madhav Gadgil, Indian Institute of Science, and Ramachandra Guha
This Fissured Land, first published in 1992, presents an interpretative history ecological history of the Indian subcontinent. It offers a theory of ecological prudence and profligacy, testing this theory across the wide sweep of South Asian history. The book especially focuses on the use and abuse of forest resources. In Part One, the authors present a general theory of ecological history. Part Two provides a fresh interpretative history of pre-modern India along with an ecologocal interpretation of the caste system. In Part Three, the authors draw upon a huge wealth of source material in their socio-ecological analysis of the modes of resource use introduced in India by the British. This book is the Hindi edition translated from English.

Bharat ki Videsh Niti
Punavlokam avum Sambhavanayein
Sumit Ganguly, Indiana University
This book provides a fairly comprehensive account of the evolution of India’s foreign policy from 1947 to the present day. It is organized primarily in the form of India’s relations with its neighbours and with key states in the global order. All the chapters in this volume utilize the level of analysis approach, a well-established conceptual scheme in the study of international politics in organizing the substantive cases. They provide crisp and lucid accounts of its developments in various parts of the world. The book is significant because there are no other viable edited volumes on the evolution of Indian foreign policy.

Performing Nationhood
The Emotional Roots of Swadeshi Nationhood in Bengal, 1905–1912
Mimasha Pandit, Mankar College
This book serves as the corridor to one's 'self'. Begun as a humble attempt to trace the performance history of Bengal it has passed through various planes of interrogation, and interpretation, until the notion of nation gained a new life in the performative space. This book has tried to trace the winding path of the emergent emotion of nationhood as it developed as a nuanced image of 'self', thereby locating the beginning of that emotion of national 'self'.

Environmental Pollution in China
What Everyone Needs to Know®
Daniel Gardner, Smith College

- A concise overview of the environmental crisis in China, which despite government efforts, continues to worsen
- Shows why the environmental problems in China should matter to everyone
- Covers the crisis in air, land, and water pollution and explains the effects it is having on the Chinese people

China’s economy has grown remarkably quickly in recent decades and is now the second largest in the world—but prosperity has come at great environmental cost.

Environmental Pollution in China: What Everyone Needs to Know® examines the nature of the country’s pollution crisis, the Chinese people’s response to it, and the efforts by the state to tackle it.

China’s Quest
The History of the Foreign Relations of the People’s Republic
REVISED AND UPDATED
John W. Garver, Georgia Institute of Technology
- First and only comprehensive history of the People’s Republic of China’s foreign relations
- Synthesizes myriad narrower studies of particular aspects of China’s foreign relations
China’s Quest, the result of over a decade of research, writing, and analysis, is both sweeping in breadth and encyclopedic in detail. Quite simply, it will be essential for any student or scholar with a strong interest in China’s foreign policy. This new and revised edition includes an additional chapter and new analysis, which address China’s strategies in the aftermath of the Western economic crisis, Xi Jinping’s embrace of assertive nationalism, the ‘China Dream’ and restoration of China’s leading global status, and the ‘One Belt, One Road’ and ‘communities of common destiny’ initiatives.

Authoritarian Containment
Public Security Bureaus and Protestant House Churches in Urban China
Marie-Eve Reny, Université de Montréal
- Provides a complex and nuanced picture of unregistered religious leaders’ dealings with local state actors
- Focuses on two Middle East cases: President Sadat’s containment strategy toward the Muslim Brotherhood in 1970s Egypt and the Mukhabarat’s containment of jihadi Salafists in a post-Zarqawi period
- Demonstrates how authoritarian regimes have employed similar strategies to control the activities of informal religious organizations
In Authoritarian Containment, Marie-Eve Reny examines why local public security bureaus tolerate unregistered Protestant churches in urban China – an officially atheist country where religious practice is controlled by the state – when the central government considers them illegal. She also notes that other authoritarian regimes have employed a similar strategies to control the activities of informal religious organizations.

Party System in India
Rekha Diwakar
University of Sussex
Party systems have important political, social and economic consequences in a polity. This book analyses the characteristics, evolution and determinants of party system in India. It argues that party system in India continues to be shaped by a complex interaction of sociological, institutional and contextual factors. The book reinforces the argument that a competitive party system remains key to the functioning of Indian democracy, and the parties remain the most important link between the state and its citizens.

Gender and Representation in Latin America
Edited by Leslie A. Schwindt-Bayer
Rice University
Gender and Representation in Latin America makes, for the first time, a comprehensive comparison of gender and representation across the region and at five different levels: the presidency, cabinets, national legislatures, political parties, and subnational governments. Drawing on the expertise of scholars of women, gender, and political institutions, this book is the most comprehensive analysis of women’s representation in Latin America to date, and an important resource for research on women’s representation worldwide.

Targeted Development: Industrialized Country Strategy in a Globalizing World
Sarah Bermeer
Duke University
As industrialized countries find it increasingly difficult to insulate themselves from adverse impacts associated with underdevelopment abroad, they now pursue a strategy of ‘targeted development,’ in which they fund and advocate for development projects when and where it serves their own self-interests. Targeted Development examines this strategy in areas such as foreign aid, trade agreements, and climate finance.

Comparative Area Studies: Methodological Rationales and Cross-Regional Applications
Edited by Ariel I. Ahram
Virginia Tech, Patrick Köllner
German Institute of Global and Area Studies, and Rudra Sil
University of Pennsylvania
In Comparative Area Studies, the editors and contributors are motivated by two basic convictions: first, that intensive regional research remains indispensable to the social sciences; and second, that this research risks becoming marginalized in the absence of concerted efforts to link it to disciplinary concepts and theories that have relevance beyond a single region.

Of Friends and Foes: Reputation and Learning in International Politics
Mark Crescenzi
University of North Carolina
Do reputations affect world politics? Crescenzi develops a theory of reputation dynamics to identify when reputations form and how they affect world politics. He identifies patterns of reputation’s influence in cooperation and conflict. Reputations for conflict exacerbate crises while reputations for cooperation and reliability make future cooperation more likely.

Postscripts on Independence
Foreign Policy Ideas, Identity, and Institutions in India and South Africa
Vineet Thakur
University of Leiden
Series edited by Siddharth Mallavarapu, Jawaharlal Nehru University, Himadeep Muppudi, Vassar College, and Raymond Duvall, University of Minnesota
India and South Africa, two states that bookended the process of twentieth century decolonization, punched above their weight in global politics in their initial years of liberation. Postscripts on Independence analyses and compares the making of foreign policy ideas, identities, and institutions of postcolonial India and South Africa. It shows how both countries have responded to the contradictory demands of their freedom struggles against colonialism and pragmatic challenges of international politics. By undertaking a comparative analysis, he explores a framework to understand the foreign policymaking fears, aspirations, and international behaviour of these two states.

Reconsidering Race
Social Science Perspectives on Racial Categories in the Age of Genomics
Edited by Kazuko Suzuki and Diego A. von Vacano
Preface by Henry Louis Gates, Jr, Harvard University

In order to more fully understand what we mean by ‘race’, social scientists need to engage genetics, medicine, and health. While the contributors of this volume reject pseudoscience and hierarchical ways of looking at race, they make the claim that it is time to reassess the Western-based, ‘social construction’ paradigm. Arguing that race is not merely socially constructed, the contributors offer a provocative collection of views on the way that social scientists must reconsider the idea of race in the age of genomics.

Authoritarianism

What Everyone Needs to Know®
Erica Frantz
Michigan State University

- Argues that authoritarian regimes have evolved considerably in the past few decades
- Shed light on big questions about authoritarianism: such as who the key actors are in dictatorships, what types of strategies they use to maintain control, and why some seem to rule forever, while others are easily overthrown
- Synthesizes key studies in the literature and summarizing their major points in an easy to interpret fashion

In Authoritarianism: What Everyone Needs to Know®, Erica Frantz guides us through today’s authoritarian wave, explaining how it came to be and what its features are. She also looks at authoritarianism themselves, focusing in particular on the techniques they use to take power, the strategies they use to survive, and how they fail. She stresses throughout that the type of authoritarian regime is important for understanding political outcomes.

Defense Policies of East-Central European Countries after 1989
Creating Stability in a Time of Uncertainty
James Peterson, Valdosta State University, and Jacek Lubecki, Georgia Southern University

This book clarifies the ways in which the defense policies of the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, and Slovakia have responded to the new atmosphere on the edge of Europe, in light of Russian aggressiveness during and after the 2013-2014 Ukrainian-Crimean crisis. In detail, the authors also clarify the exact ways in which these policies have converged and diverged currently as well as in their deep historical past and more immediate pre-1989 communist experiences.

Racing to the Top
How Energy Fuels System Leadership in World Politics
William R. Thompson, Indiana University Bloomington, and Leila Zakhira, Concordia College

Climate change, energy transition, U.S. relative decline, and Chinese ascent are all ongoing processes. Their linkages, however, have not yet been fully defined. Climate change makes transitioning from non-renewable fuels to alternative energy a key area for any country to develop, and, in the past, energy transitions have been central to the rise of new system leaders. In our time, the likelihood of a successful response to global warming and effective systemic leadership hinge on which state leads in replacing carbon for non-carbon energy sources in fueling their economies.

The Rules of War
The Geneva Conventions in the Age of Terror
Derek Jinks, Arizona State University College of Law

- A brief and crystal-clear introduction to the Geneva Conventions for general readers – who they protect, how they are enforced, and whether they apply to terrorists.

With the scandal over prison abuse at Abu Ghraib and the legal controversy over the enemy combatants at Guantanamo Bay, the proper treatment of prisoners of war has once again been thrust into the news. At the heart of this debate stand the Geneva Conventions. Derek Jinks provides a valuable guide to the several Conventions, explaining when they apply, how they should be enforced, and who they protect, including special ops forces, private military contractors, nationals who have fallen into the hands of the enemy, unlawful combatants such as the Guantanamo detainees, and even terrorists.

The Peace Continuum
What It Is and How to Study It
Christian Davenport and Patrick Regan, both at University of Notre Dame, and Erik Melander, University of Uppsala

The idea of studying peace – over studying war, genocide and political violence and then inferring about peace – has gained traction recently, but how should it be studied? The Peace Continuum reviews the literature and offers three alternative ways in which peace could be conceptualized and studied.

Borderland Battles
Violence, Crime, and Governance at the Edges of Colombia’s War
Annette Idler, University of Oxford

This book argues that borderlands intensify security threats at the conflict-crime nexus. It demonstrates the multiple insecurities that arise from complex interactions among rebels, criminals, and other violent non-state groups. Challenging urban biases and state-centric views, it draws on unprecedented multi-year fieldwork in the war-torn marginalized Colombian-Ecuadorian and Colombian-Venezuelan borderlands.

The Ethics and Practice of Refugee Repatriation
Mollie Gerver, University of Essex

Mollie Gerver considers when bodies such as the UN, government agencies and NGOs ought to help refugees to return home. Drawing on original interviews with 172 refugees before and after repatriation, she resolves six moral puzzles arising from repatriation using the methods of analytical philosophy to provide a more ethical framework.

A Good Life on a Finite Earth
The Political Economy of Green Growth
Daniel J. Fiorino. American University
The potential conflict among economic and ecological goals has formed the central fault line of environmental politics in the United States and most other countries since the 1970s. This offers a stark choice between prosperity and growth, on the one hand, and ecological degradation on the other. But as Daniel J. Fiorino examines in this book, the concept of green growth provides an alternative path that focuses on ecological and economic balance. While he focuses on the United States, Fiorino will also draw comparisons to green growth policy in other countries, including Germany, China, and Brazil.

Ending Africa’s Energy Deficit and the Law
Achieving Sustainable Energy for All in Africa
Edited by Yinka Omorogbe, Edo State, Nigeria, and Ada Ordor, University of Cape Town
The need for energy might be universal, but access to it is not. Omorogbe and Ordor bring together experts in their field to ask how corruption and limited regulation have stalled progress in Africa, examining the impact on disabled people, women, and children, and its relation to environmental and humanitarian concerns.

Food and Nutrition
What Everyone Needs to Know®
PK Newby. Harvard University
• Provides a rich overview of contemporary and historical food systems, as well as concepts in nutrition science
• Addresses contemporary nutritional problems and the effects of modern food production on human health
• Examines the relationship between humans, the environment, and food across time and space

It seems that practically every day there is news about some new super-nutrient, super diet, or super food that promises to help us to be healthier, smarter, happier, fight disease, lose weight, or live longer. This book sorts through this information and looks at food systems globally and historically, providing an overview of the relationship between humans, the environment, and food.

Spy Watching
Intelligence Accountability in the United States
Loch K. Johnson, University of Georgia
- An authoritative overview of both America’s intelligence agencies and Congress’s intermittent efforts to reign them in through oversight
- Emphasizes the media’s crucial role in checking intelligence agencies’ secret abuse of power
- Features new interviews with U.S. spymasters, delving into their view on the tug-of-war between privacy and security
Given the dangers in the world – from terrorism to pandemics – nations must have effective spy services; yet, to prevent the misuse of secret power, democracies must also ensure that their spies are well supervised. Loch Johnson’s Spy Watching focuses on the obstacles encountered by America as it pursues more effective intelligence accountability.

Consent on Campus

A Manifesto

Donna Freitas

University of Notre Dame

• Written by a leading expert on sex and campus culture
• Draws on over ten years of research and discussions with college students
• Offers a blueprint for how universities can teach more effectively about consent

Americans have finally started to pay attention to the sexual assault crisis on our college campuses. Yet, Donna Freitas warns, the way universities educate students about sexual assault and consent is wholly inadequate. Universities are, she argues, more focused on avoiding lawsuits and scandals than on addressing the heart of the problem. Freitas advocates for teaching not just how to consent but why it’s important to care about consent – and for doing so in the university’s most important space: the classroom. Consent on Campus is a call to action for university administrators, faculty, parents, and students themselves to create cultures of consent on their campuses.

Accountability for Killing
Moral Responsibility for Collateral Damage in America’s Post-9/11 Wars
Neta Crawford, Boston University
A sophisticated and intellectually powerful analysis of culpability and moral responsibility in war, Accountability for Killing focuses on the causes of many episodes of foreseeable collateral damage. Why was there so much unintended killing of civilians in the U.S. wars zones in Afghanistan, Iraq, and Pakistan? Is ‘collateral damage’ simply an unavoidable consequence of all wars? Why, when the U.S. military tries so hard to limit collateral damage, does so much of it seem to occur? Trenchant, original, and ranging across security studies, international law, ethics, and international relations, Accountability for Killing will reshape our understanding of the ethics of contemporary war.

Litigating Religions
An Essay on Human Rights, Courts, and Beliefs
Christopher McCrudden, Queen’s University Belfast
Human rights literature has tended to exclude religious foundations from the realm of human rights. This has led to a lack of progress which confuse our understanding of the relationship between human rights and religion; this book argues that by paying close attention to developments in human rights litigation we can make theoretical progress.

HUMAN RIGHTS & POLITICS
Reframing 1968

James Ron, University of Minnesota, Shannon Golden, Center for Victims of Torture, David Crow, CIDE, Mexico, and Archana Pandya, openGlobalRights

While debates about human rights are waged in elite circles, what do publics in the global South think about human rights ideas and the organizations that promote them? Drawing on large-scale public opinion surveys and interviews with human rights practitioners in India, Mexico, Morocco, and Nigeria, Reframing 1968 explores the historical, political and social legacy of 1968 and considers how it is viewed and enforced. This commentary thematically assesses all aspects of the Declaration’s provisions, providing an overview of its impact.

The Practical Turn in Political Theory
Eva Erman, Stockholm University, and Niklas Möller, Royal Institute of Technology (KTH)

In several sub-domains of political theory, theorists have suggested that practices constrain principles in various ways. This book joins five key debates in the current theoretical literature that have been largely taking place in isolation and identifies common strands of argument and their shared problems. By illuminating these connections and cross-fertilising key debates in the current theoretical literature, it develops a unified way forward for practice-based political theory.

The ICTY’s Impact in Bosnia and Serbia
Diane Orentlicher, American University

Through an in-depth case study, Some Kind of Justice offers fresh insights about two questions now the subject of robust debate: What goals can we plausibly assign to international criminal tribunals? What factors determine the impact of distant courts on societies that have seen vicious violence? The book offers a timely and original account of how the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) affected local communities, and the factors that shape its changing impact over time.

Necessary Evil
How to Fix Finance by Saving Human Rights
David Kinley, University of Sydney

• Authored by a world-renowned scholar of human rights law
• Marshals a wealth of material from bankers, economists, lawyers and politicians, as well as human rights activists, philosophers, historians and anthropologists, alongside the author’s own experiences working in the field
• Powerfully demonstrates that finance has always had a social function above and beyond the profit motive

Necessary Evil is a penetrating investigation into how the financial system both advances and undermines progress in human rights. It will be an indispensable read for anyone interested in how global finance can be reformed in ways that will salvage its legitimacy and fulfill its role as a human rights provider, not a vandal.

The Human Rights-Based Approach to Higher Education
Jane Kotzmann, Deakin University School of Law

This book seeks to determine if there is still a place for the human right to higher education in the current international context. It compares and contrasts two general theoretical models that are used to frame higher education policy: the market-based approach and the human rights-based approach. It contributes to an understanding of the likely effectiveness of each approach to higher education provision in terms of teaching and learning. This understanding should enable the development of more improved, sophisticated, and ultimately successful higher education policies.

Auctioning the American Dream
John Attanasio, International Academy of Legal Process and Procedure

Using both theoretical methods and practical political analysis, this book shows how recent Supreme Court decisions and campaign finance regulations map onto a pernicious and growing inequality in America. John Attanasio puts forward a novel solution grounded in a new principle of personal autonomy. The solution Attanasio proposes is the principle of ‘distributive autonomy,’ sharply contrasting it with the individualism of modern libertarian ideas, which have given rise to the radical inequality that reduces, rather than enhances, autonomy. After Injury
A Historical Anatomy of Forgiveness, Resentment, and Apology
Ashraf H.A. Rushdy, Wesleyan University
After Injury explores the practices of forgiveness, resentment, and apology in three key moments when they were undergoing a dramatic change. The three moments are early Christian history (for forgiveness), the shift from British eighteenth-century to Continental nineteenth-century philosophers (for resentment), and the moment in the 1950s postwar world in which British ordinary language philosophers and American sociologists of everyday life theorized what it means to express or perform an apology. The debates that arose in those key moments have largely defined our contemporary study of these practices.

The Struggle for Freedom from Fear
Contesting Violence against Women at the Frontiers of Globalization
Alison Brysk, University of California, Santa Barbara
How can we understand and contest the global wave of violence against women? In this book, Alison Brysk shows that gender violence across countries tends to change as countries develop and liberalize, but not in the ways that we might predict. She shows how liberalizing authoritarian countries and transitional democracies may experience more shifting patterns and greater levels of violence than less developed and democratic countries, due to changes and uncertainties in economic and political structures. While a combination of international action, law, public policy, civil society mobilization, and changes in social values work to decrease gender violence, Brysk assesses the potential, limits, and balance of these measures.

Our Time Has Come
How India is Making Its Place in the World
Alyssa Ayres
Council on Foreign Relations
• Major work by top South Asia specialist on how India envisions its role in the world
• Covers the key debates in 21st-century India: growth versus inclusion, trade and foreign investment, and autonomy in foreign policy
• Highlights how India’s evolution in business, trade, and foreign policy affects the US

Long plagued by poverty, India’s recent economic growth has vaulted it into the ranks of the world’s emerging powers—but what kind of power it wants to be remains a mystery. Cautious Superpower explains why India behaves the way it does, and the role it is likely to play globally as its prominence grows.

Indian Suffragettes
Female Identities and Transnational Networks
Sumita Mukherjee
University of Bristol
Indian Suffragettes focuses on the different geographical spaces in which Indian women were operating and the various transnational networks they participated in. It covers the period from the 1910s up until 1950. It shows how Indian suffragettes positioned themselves and were represented in these locales and invoked varying identities, whether regional, national, imperial, or international, in the context of debates about the vote. Crucially and significantly, this case study of Indian suffragettes analyses how these global connections had an impact on social and political change in the Indian subcontinent, highlighting the under-researched field of Indian mobility at a time when they were colonial subjects.

The Man Who Remade India
A Biography of P.V. Narasimha Rao
Vinay Sitapati
• The Economist named the Indian edition a ‘Book of the Year’ in 2016
• Authoritative biography of a world-changing figure that very few know about outside of India
• Based on Narasimha Rao’s personal papers, which have never been made public before, and over 100 interviews with leading figures in Indian politics and cultural life.

Sitapati’s biography of Rao, the prime minister of India in 1991, who reinvented his country, unleashing a market revolution that rivaled the one set in motion by Deng Xiaoping a dozen years before, is a must-read for anyone interested in the transformation of India.

Art Attacks
Violence and Offence-Taking in India
Malvika Maheshwari. Ashoka University
This book tells the story of violence against artists in India, marked by the intensifying sense of insecurity, fear, frustration and anger in the art world. But to bring out its complexities – to build an analytical account for understanding what such destructive and even competitive, attacks on artists convey about India’s liberal democracy, given that violence in its many avatars has not so much been an aberration to the form of India’s liberal democracy as much as its very condition – the book attempts to map the concrete political transformations that have informed its dynamic unfolding. In other words, as opposed to simply adding to the prevalent commentaries on violent regulation of free speech in India, this work focuses on the dynamics of violence in that regulation.

Accumulation by Segregation

Muslim Localities in Delhi

Ghazala Jamil, Jawaharlal Nehru University

Based on ethnographical study of Muslim neighbourhoods, the book argues that it is not merely communal discrimination and prejudice that causes formation of segregated Muslim enclaves. Through an intricately weaved argument the book explains that rather than being excluded from the city, the Muslim areas contain a segment of immobile labour and capital that are uniquely positioned for exploitation in the globalised world. Segregated spaces provide for accumulation in favour of other spaces in the city.

Habeas Corpus in Wartime
From the Tower of London to Guantanamo Bay
Amanda L. Tyler, University of California
This book is the most comprehensive account of the role of habeas corpus in wartime ever written. It draws on a wealth of untapped resources to shed light on the political and legal understanding of habeas corpus that has unfolded over the course of Anglo-American history. The book traces the roots of the habeas privilege enshrined in the United States Constitution to England and then carries the story forward to document the profound influence of English law on early American law. It then takes the story forward to document the understanding of the privilege and the role of suspension over the course of American history, giving special attention to important historical episodes when the Constitution has come under great stress, such as the Civil War, Reconstruction, World War II, and the War on Terror. The original historical materials presented have a great deal to contribute to modern debates over the scope of executive power to arrest, and to the role of courts in wartime.

China and the Geopolitics of Rare Earths
Sophia Kalantzakos, New York University
Rare earths, indispensable inputs for high tech, military, and renewable applications, remain in the hands of China, a power on the rise. Largely out of the public eye prior to 2010, rare earths, and China’s monopoly over them, became international news after China ‘unofficially’ halted exports to Japan, the United States, and Europe following a collision between Chinese and Japanese boats in the East China Sea. Focusing on China’s monopoly over the rare earth industry, this book examines the impacts of growing worldwide resource competition and the complexities policymakers face as they develop strategies and responses in an increasingly globalized world.

China’s India War
Collision Course on the Roof of the World
Bertil Lintner, Svenska Dagbladet
The 1962 war between India and China was not about a disputed border. It was the result of China’s desire to become the leader of the ‘Third World’ – and, at a time when China was barely recovering from the disastrous Great Leap Forward and its architect, Mao Zedong, was discredited, to unite different factions within the Chinese leadership against an outside enemy: India. China won the war, became the main voice of revolutionary movements in the Third World – and Mao Zedong was back in power.

Emigrants Get Political
Mexican Migrants Engage Their Home Towns
Michael S. Danielson
George Washington University

Migrants have become an important social and political constituency throughout the world. In addition to sending remittances to their home countries, many migrants maintain political ties with their nations of origin through the expansion of dual citizenship and voting rights. But to what extent do migrants influence their home communities and governments? Michael S. Danielson develops a theory of and methodological model for studying migrant impact on the communities and countries they leave behind, examining a largely unexplored area of research in the migration literature.

This book is the first of its kind to examine tunnels from the perspective of international law, with a view to minimizing the harm caused to civilians on all sides while keeping in mind the complexity of the operational and strategic challenges. Dr. Richemond-Barak identifies issues unique to underground warfare, including analyzing traditional international humanitarian law issues as they relate to tunnels and underground operations such as principles of dual use, proportionality, and advanced warning, a re-thinking of the lawfulness of certain weapons, and complex questions such as when tunnels are dug and underneath a state’s own civilian infrastructure and under cultural and religious sites.

Will China’s Rise Be Peaceful?
Security, Stability, and Legitimacy
Edited by Asle Toje. Norwegian Nobel Institute
As the rest of the world worries about China’s economic prospects, Will China’s Rise be Peaceful? worries about the effect of a more powerful China will have on international peace and stability. Bringing together the work of seasoned experts and younger scholars, this volume offers an inclusive examination of the effects of historical patterns – whether interrupted or intact – by the rise of China. The authors argue that the most populous nation on the globe – and its second largest economy – may continue to rise peacefully, but that powerful internal and external factors work against this.

THIRD EDITION
Charles Townshend. Keele University
Is terrorism crime or war? Can there be a ‘war against terrorism’? In this fully updated edition, Charles Townshend unravels the questions at the heart of the problem of terrorism – its causes, methods, effects, and limitations – suggesting that it must be understood as a political strategy whose threat can be rationally grasped and answered.

Why and When Top Down Management of Foreign Aid Doesn’t Work
Dan Honig. Johns Hopkins University
High-quality implementation of foreign aid interventions sometimes requires employee use of contextual information that will be precluded by tight control management control. Drawing from over 130 interviews and statistical analysis of a novel database of over 14,000 discrete development projects, Honig finds that top-down controls sometimes undermine development project success.

The Foreign Policy of Islamist Political Parties
Ideology in Practice
Edited by Mohamed-Ali Adraoui, Georgetown University

Drawing on a series of case studies, this collective work sheds light on six national trajectories of Islamism: in Morocco (the Party of Justice and Development), Tunisia (Ennahda), Egypt (the Muslim Brotherhood), Palestine (Hamas), Lebanon (Hezbollah) and Turkey (AKP). It looks at what has been produced by the representatives of political Islam in each case, and how the way these representatives have put their words and their ideological aspirations into action within their foreign policies.

When Political Transitions Work

Reconciliation as Interdependence

Fanie du Toit, Institute of Justice and Reconciliation

In When Political Transitions Work, Fanie du Toit develops a coherent and versatile theory of reconciliation-as-interdependence, based on the assumption that a state’s success is inextricably linked to its enemies, and a policy of mutual well-being is the surest and shortest path to prosperity and peace for both.

Plausible Legality
Legal Culture and Political Imperative in the Global War on Terror
Rebecca Sanders, University of Cincinnati
After 9/11, American officials authorized torture, extraordinary rendition, indefinite detention, military commissions, targeted killing, and mass surveillance. This book analyses the role of human rights and humanitarian legal norms in shaping these practices. By strategically manipulating legal rules, policymakers and their lawyers successfully normalized abuses and secured impunity for human rights violations.

The Sit Room
In the Theater of War and Peace
David Scheffer.
Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law
The Sit Room is a swift-moving narrative set over three years in the world’s most important policy-making sanctum: the White House Situation Room. This book exposes the secret deliberations of the Clinton Administration as it grappled with shattered proposals to end the genocidal war in Bosnia. This behind-the-scenes story reveals authentic policy-making at the highest levels, with a unique journey into the arena of war and peace where spirited debate guided America’s foreign policy.

Giving Aid Effectively
The Politics of Environmental Performance and Selectivity at Multilateral Development Banks
Mark T. Buntaine. University of California-Santa Barbara
In Giving Aid Effectively, Mark T. Buntaine argues that countries that are members of international organizations have prompted multilateral development banks to give development and environmental aid more effectively by generating better information about performance. To reach this conclusion, he employs a systematic analysis of responses to evaluations and in-depth case studies about the use of information at multilateral development banks.

The Limits of Human Rights
Edited by Bardo Fassbender. University of St Gallen, and Knut Traisbach. Venice Academy of Human Rights
The continuous expansion of human rights can often appear to be positive, yet it provokes criticism.
This volume argues against the internationalisation of human rights proving the world is moving from a liberal to community interests, stating contentious supervision, evaluation, and substitution are far more common than genuine cooperation.

Development of post-authoritarian politics in the returnees on the public life, culture, institutions, and provides the first comprehensive Diaspora, and Return opposition forces beyond their national borders. Exile, co-nationals, the authoritarian rulers emboldened out of the country. Yet, by enlarging a diaspora of public spheres by forcing opposition movements would assure their control of politics and domestic artists, and political and social activists to other centuries, dictatorships in Latin America hastened the outward movement of intellectuals, academics, and authoritarian rulers emboldened opposition forces beyond their national borders. Exile, Diaspora, and Return provides the first comprehensive analysis of diasporic experiences and the impact of returnees on the public life, culture, institutions, and development of post-authoritarian politics in the Southern Cone of the Americas.

Electoral Rules and Democracy in Latin America
Cynthia McClintock
George Washington University
Recently, most Latin American countries have shifted from a plurality (first-past-the-post) rule for the election of the president to a runoff (two-round) rule. This book is the first rigorous assessment of the implications of runoff versus plurality rules throughout Latin America, and demonstrates that, in contrast to early scholarly skepticism about runoff, it has been positive for democracy in the region.

Jose Marti: Revolution, Politics and Letters
Volume One: Cuban Independence
José Martí
Edited by Ana Dopico
New York University
Translated by Fred Fornoff
University of Pittsburgh, Johnstown
José Martí occupies a central place in Latin American letters, and he is an unparalleled foundational figure in Cuban culture. Martí’s writing shaped a hemispheric consciousness in the Americas, and as national poet and patriotic ‘apostle,’ he is revered by generations of Cubans everywhere. As essayist, journalist, and revolutionary, Martí fought for Cuban independence and helped defend the ideal of Latin American autonomy against empires old and new.

The Zapatista Movement and Mexico’s Democratic Transition
Mobilization, Success, and Survival
Maria Inclán
Centro de Investigación y Docencia Económicas
Transitions from authoritarian to democratic governments can provide ripe scenarios for the emergence of new, insurgent political actors and causes. During peaceful transitions, such movements may become influential political players and gain representation for previously neglected interests and sectors of the population. But for this to happen, insurgent social movements need opportunities for mobilization, success, and survival. This book looks at Mexico’s Zapatista movement, and why the movement was able to mobilize sympathy and support for the indigenous agenda inside and outside of the country, yet failed to achieve their goals vis-à-vis the Mexican state.

The New Middle East
What Everyone Needs to Know®
James L. Gelvin, UCLA
- Written in a lively and clear style by one of the leading scholars in modern Middle Eastern history
- Clearly traces the origins and history of the Islamic State (ISIS/ISIL), the ideological factors that made it unique among jihadi groups, the reasons for its successes, and its future
- Pays special attention to the Syrian uprising, emphasizing the extent to which it was militarized and sectarianized, and forecasts possible outcomes

In the wake of the Soviet Union’s collapse, the 2003 American invasion of Iraq, and the Arab uprisings of 2010-2011, a new Middle East took shape. In this book, James L. Gelvin explores these changes, offering a succinct overview of the region’s recent political and cultural historical developments. He focuses particularly on the uprisings and their aftermath, the Syrian Civil War, ISIS, and those factors that threaten the lives of the region’s inhabitants.

Compulsion in Religion

Saddam Hussein, Islam, and the Roots of Insurgencies in Iraq

Samuel Helfont. University of Pennsylvania. Compulsion in Religion investigates religion and politics in Saddam Hussein’s Iraq as well as the roots of the religious insurgencies that erupted in Iraq following the American-led invasion in 2003. In looking at Saddam Hussein’s policies in the 1990s, many have interpreted his support for state religion as evidence of a dramatic shift away from Arab nationalism toward political Islam. While Islam did play a greater role in the regime’s symbols and Saddam’s statements in the 1990s than it had in earlier decades, the archival records and the regime’s internal documents challenge this theory.

Sayyid Qutb and the Origins of Radical Islamism

John Calvert. Crefon University. Sayyid Qutb (1906–1966) is considered one of the most influential ideologues of radical Islamism. This biography rescues Qutb from the label of ‘terrorist’ by offering a sophisticated analysis of his thought. It offers a view into the world of British colonialism, the birth of Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood, and the growth of radical Islam.

Islamists and the Politics of the Arab Uprisings

Governance, Pluralisation and Contention

Edited by Paola Rivetti. Dublin City University, and Hendrik Kraetzschmar. University of Leeds. How can we account for the internal conflicts among Islamist players after the 2011/2012 Arab uprisings? How can we assess the performance of Islamist parties in power? What geopolitical reconfigurations have the uprisings created, and what opportunities have arisen for Islamists to claim a stronger political role in domestic and regional politics? These questions are addressed in this book, which looks at the dynamics in place during the aftermath of the Arab uprisings in a wide range of countries across the Middle East and North Africa.

Revisiting the Arab Uprisings

The Politics of a Revolutionary Moment

Edited by Stéphane Lacroix. and Pierre Lacroix, both at Sciences Po’s Centre de Recherches Internationales (CERI). Drawing on an A-list of Middle East experts, this book assesses the relative merits of the thwarted paths to democracy in the ‘Arab Spring’ states.

Armies of Sand
The Past, Present, and Future of Arab Military Effectiveness
Kenneth Pollack, Brookings Institution
• Explains the ineffectiveness of Arab military action over the last half-century
• Explores the way in which Soviet doctrine prevented Arab military success
• Reveals changes which may come to military action by Middle East states in the near future
Armies of Sand seeks to answer the question, ‘why have Arab armed forces fared so poorly in battle since the Second World War?’ It explores four different explanations that scholars, soldiers, and military experts have suggested: Soviet doctrine, politicization, underdevelopment, and culture. To do so, it looks at the performance of over two-dozen Arab militaries from 1948 to 2017, and compares them to a half-dozen non-Arab militaries, to conclude that politics, economics, and culture all contribute to the past weakness of Arab armies. It concludes by addressing circumstances in which Arab military fortunes may shift as both warfare and their societies change.

Hezbollah
Socialisation and Its Tragic Ironies
Adham Saouli, University of St Andrews
For three decades we believed that the impetus of establishing an Islamic state in Lebanon was Hezbollah’s main goal. This book disagrees. Drawn from over fifteen years of research, it traces Hezbollah’s political trajectory, or socialisation process, from its birth in 1982 to 2017. It identifies the religio-political identity and doctrine that inspire Hezbollah and the political-strategic goals that motivate it. It argues that war making with Israel has driven Hezbollah’s socialisation in Lebanon and the region, transforming the Islamist movement from a loose organization into one of the world’s most powerful and sophisticated armed political movements.

Riots, strikes and protests are heavily mediatised events. Media representations thus play a crucial role in narrating instances of civil disorder for the public where they define the issues at stake, delimit frames of reference and debate, and ultimately legitimise or delegitimise the actors, actions and causes involved. From a critical semiotic perspective, drawing on insights from linguistics, multimodality and media studies, this book explores the ideological dimensions of media representation and its function in discursively constructing public understandings of, and attitudes toward, civil disorder. A range of case studies are presented which cut across time, communicative modality and genre, and geo-political context.

The question of how to quantify the impact and value of research looms large in the minds of academics, policy makers, academic administrators, and scientists. Measuring Research: What Everyone Needs to Know® will provide, for the first time, an accessible account of these processes. Following a brief history of scholarly communication and its measurement, Cassidy R. Sugimoto and Vincent Larivière will look at the classification of knowledge, the role of peer review, emerging issues within the scholarly communication system, and potential changes for measuring research. This book provides a comprehensive guide to understanding the measurement of research and scholarly communication.

Media and Protest Logics in the Digital Era
The Umbrella Movement in Hong Kong
Francis L.F. Lee and Joseph M. Chan, Chinese University of Hong Kong

For 79 days in 2014, Hong Kong became the focus of international attention due to a public demonstration for genuine democracy that would become known as the Umbrella Movement. On the surface, this movement was not unlike other large-scale protest movements that have occurred in recent years. However, it was distinct in how bottom-up processes evolved into a centrally organized, programmatic movement with concrete policy demands. This book analyzes how traditional mass media institutions and digital media combined with on-the-ground networks in such a way as to propel citizen participation and the evolution of the movement as a whole.

Apostles of Certainty
Data Journalism and the Politics of Doubt
C.W. Anderson, University of Leeds

Can journalists use data in order to produce better journalism? In this book, C.W. Anderson traces the genealogy of data journalism and its material and technological underpinnings, arguing that the use of data in news reporting is inevitably intertwined with national politics, the evolution of computable databases, and the history of professional scientific fields. This book shows how the changes in specifically journalistic understandings of evidence can help us think through the current ‘digital data moment’ in ways that go beyond simply journalism.

China’s Digital Nationalism
Nationalism, in China as much as elsewhere, is today adopted, filtered, transformed, enhanced, and accelerated through digital networks. And as we have increasingly seen, nationalism in digital spheres interacts in complicated ways with nationalism ‘on the ground’. Using two cases, the infamous Nanjing Massacre of 1937 and the recent disputes between China and Japan over islands in the East China Sea, this book shows how various stakeholders in China construct networks and deploy power to shape nationalism for their own ends.

The Only Constant is Change
Technology, Political Communication, and Innovation Over Time
Ben Epstein, DePaul University

The overarching goals of political communication rarely change, yet political communication strategies have evolved a great deal over the course of American history. This book explores the technological, behavioral, and political forces that bring about disruptive and permanent changes in political communication. Covering over 300 years of political communication revolutions, Ben Epstein provides greater understanding of where we are currently in the recurring political communication cycle, and where we might be headed.

Digital Feminist Activism
Girls and Women Fight Back Against Rape Culture
Kaitlynn Mendes, University of Leicester, Jessalyne Kelly, University of Calgary, and Jessica Ringrose, University College London

In light of popular feminist movements such as #MeToo, which harness new technologies to challenge rape culture, this pioneering book explores how digital feminist campaigns are used, felt, and experienced by members of the public including feminist leaders and ‘everyday’ activists and participants.

Computational Propaganda
Political Parties, Politicians, and Political Manipulation on Social Media
Samuel Woolley, and Philip N. Howard, both at University of Oxford

Including case studies from nine countries and covering propaganda efforts over a wide array of social media platforms, this book argues that bots, fake accounts, and social media algorithms amount to a new political communications mechanism that it terms ‘computational propaganda.’
Institutions. It argues that we are experiencing a proliferation of organizational forms and detailed accounts of the origins of prominent and diverse systems. The book provides a comprehensive overview of the research in economics, political science, law, and sociology that has generated considerable insight into the politics of democratic and authoritarian systems.

POLITICAL ECONOMY

Liberalism in Illiberal States
Ideas and Economic Adjustment in Contemporary Europe
Mark L. Vail, Tulane University
Liberalism in Illiberal States acknowledges the dominance of economic liberalism, but argues that its implementation in specific countries is always unique and dependent upon powerful historical factors. This book focuses on France, Germany, and Italy – countries that many scholars do not view as ‘liberal’ at all – and contends they have in fact developed distinct forms of national liberalism, of which their postwar models of capitalism were merely one manifestation.

The New Frontier
Merit Vs. Caste in the Indian IT Sector
Marilyn Fernandez, Santa Clara University
This book addresses pertinent issues around the role and status of caste in the new private occupational IT sector that boasts of merit as the ultimate equalizer. The author finds that in spite of the narrative of equality and justice, caste and gender status continues to influence access to IT education and in the new IT occupations in India.

Development
A Very Short Introduction
Ian Goldin, Oxford Martin School, and University of Oxford
How do nations escape poverty and achieve economic and social progress? Ian Goldin, a former vice-president of the World Bank, explains what development means in its broadest sense – encompassing education, health, and gender equality as well as economic growth. He discusses the shift from state-led strategies, to ones driven by market forces.

The Political Economy of Italy’s Decline
Andrea Lorenzo Capussela
Italy is a country of recent decline and long-standing idiosyncratic traits – a rich society where the rule of law is weak and political accountability is low. This book draws on political economic literature and historical analysis to argue that a battle of ideas can ease the shift to a fairer and more efficient equilibrium.

The Politics of Derivatives Regulation After the 2008 Crisis
Edited by Eric Helleiner, and Irene Spagna, both at University of Waterloo, and Stefano Pagliari, City University of London
What has been done since the 2008 financial crisis to reform the regulation of derivatives markets? The volume analyzes the goals, limitations, and unexpected outcomes associated with post-crisis international initiatives to regulate these markets, as well as the different transnational, inter-state, and domestic political dynamics that have shaped these outcomes.

NEW EDITION

The Welfare State in Europe
Economic and Social Perspectives
SECOND EDITION

Pierre Pestieau, University of Liege, and Mathieu Lefebvre, University of Strasbourg

Although there is a consensus in Europe that it is the government’s responsibility to ensure the welfare of its citizens, there are calls to roll back spending on the welfare state. This book examines the prospects of the welfare state and analyses the performance of these systems and the reforms that should be undertaken.

Shadow Networks
Financial and the System that Caused Crisis

Francisco Louçã, ISSEG, Lisbon, University, and Michael Ash, University of Massachusetts Amherst

Many accounts of the financial crisis focus on renegade activity in marginal financial sectors. This book argues that far from this pervading view the shadow network that initiated the crisis is tightly networked with bank-based finance. It traces these networks to explain how the now decade-long crisis took shape.

Mapping Power
The Political Economy of Electricity in India’s States

Edited by Ranjit Bharvirkar.

India program, Regulatory Assistance Project, Navroz K. Dubash, Centre for Policy Research, and Sunila Kale

India’s electricity sector remains marked by financial indebtedness and low access and quality. To understand why, Mapping Power provides the first thorough analysis of the political economy of electricity in Indian states. The book examines how the political economy of power both shapes and is shaped by a state’s political economy. It concludes that attempts to depoliticize the sector are misplaced. Instead, successful reform efforts should aim at a positive dynamic between electricity reform and electoral success.

Terrorism
What Everyone Needs to Know®

Todd Sandler, University of Texas at Dallas

- Addresses one of the most important security questions of the time and summarizes the state of terrorism over the last 50 years
- Puts forward many well-researched views that are against conventional wisdom with respect to terrorism and counterterrorism
- Views terrorists as rational actors, who respond in a predictable fashion to their environment

In this book, Todd Sandler educates and demystifies terrorism and its myriad aspects for educated readers, who want to gain an understanding of one of the main security problems confronting the world today. Based on a wealth past research, current thinking about terrorism and the practice of counterterrorism are elucidated.

Law and the Political Economy of World Hunger

Anna Chadwick, University of Glasgow

After the global food crisis of 2007-2011, many Non-Government Organizations blamed speculators trading in commodity derivatives, viewing speculative driven high price volatility in grain markets as culpable for the disaster. Chadwick disagrees, arguing that current legal regimes bear far more responsibility for the tragedy of world hunger.

U.S. has played in stabilizing the world economy. Daniel McDowell highlights the unique role that the U.S. has regularly acted, often alongside the IMF, as an international lender of last resort by selectively bailing out foreign economies in crisis. The book explores how and why the U.S. has done so.

In The Globotics Upheaval, Richard Baldwin explains how digital technology will bring globalization and robotics, or ‘globotics,’ to previously unaffected professional and service sectors. Jobs will be displaced at the eruptive pace of digital technology, leading to discontent among the professional, white-collar, and service workers whose jobs are threatened. Baldwin analyzes how these rapid changes are likely to affect government policies and envisions the future of employment, predicting an increase in face-to-face interaction that will strengthen bonds in local communities.

In Fiscal Therapy, William G. Gale takes a critical look at how and why the U.S. has run up its debt so high in the last four decades, what other countries have done to dig themselves out of this level of red ink, and what needs to be done now if the U.S. is to avoid bankruptcy in the 2050s and beyond. The book is aimed at a general audience interested in America’s economic future.

Contesting the Repressive State

Why Ordinary Egyptians Protested During the Arab Spring

Kira D. Jumet
Hamilton College

For years prior to the Arab Spring, opposition activists in Egypt organized protests with limited success. So why and how did thousands of Egyptian citizens suddenly take to the streets against the Mubarak regime in January 2011?

Contesting the Repressive State not only answers this question, but asks specifically why and how people who are not part of political movements choose to engage or not engage in anti-government protest under repressive regimes. Ultimately, Kira D. Jumet explores how social media, violent government repression, changes in political opportunities, and the military influenced individual decisions to protest or not protest.

Approaches to Ethnography

Analysis and Representation in Participant Observation

Edited by Colin Jerolmack
New York University, and Shamus Khan
Columbia University

Approaches to Ethnography illustrates the various modes of representation and analysis that typify participant observation research. This volume concisely lays out the predominant analytic lenses that ethnographers use to explain social action. Each chapter features a prominent ethnographer delineating a distinct approach to the study of everyday life and reflecting on how their approach shapes the way they analyze and represent the field. Taken together, the collection is a practical guide that spells out how different styles of ethnography illuminate different dimensions of everyday social life for undergraduate and graduate courses on qualitative research methods.

- Federico Varese is prize-winning author and leading authority on organized crime
- A global look at the major mafias from the Japanese Yakuza to the Sicilian Cosa Nostra, and the New York Mafia to the Russian Vory-v-Vakone

Today, mafias operate across the globe, with hundreds of thousands of members and billions of dollars in revenue. From Hong Kong to New York, these vast organizations spread their tentacles into politics, finance and everyday life. Criminologist Federico Varese draws on a lifetime’s research to give us access to some of the world’s most secretive societies. Mixing reportage with case studies and historical insights, this is the story of mafia as it really is: filled with boredom and drama, death and disaster, ambition and betrayal.

City Power
Urban Governance in a Global Age
Richard Schragger
University of Virginia Law School

Reigning theories of urban power suggest that in a world dominated by footloose transnational capital, cities have little capacity to effect social change. In City Power, Richard Schragger challenges this conventional wisdom, arguing that cities can and should pursue aims other than making themselves attractive to global capital. Using the municipal living wage movement as an example, Schragger explains why cities are well-positioned to address issues like income equality and how our institutions can be designed to allow them to do so.

Agamben’s Philosophical Lineage

Edited by Adam Kotsko
Shimer College, and Carlo Salzani

One of the greatest challenges Agamben presents to his readers is the vast and often bewildering range of sources he draws upon in his work. Looking at figures including Michel Foucault, St Paul, Nietzsche, the Marquis de Sade, Simone Weil and Hannah Arendt, this one-stop reference to Agamben’s influences covers 30 thinkers: his primary interlocutors, his secondary references, and the figures who lurk in the background of his arguments without being directly mentioned.

Shaping Policy in India

Alliance, Advocacy, Activism

Rajesh Chakrabarti
Jindal Global Business School, and Kaushiki Sanyal Sunay Policy Advisory

The book explores the interaction of political parties, bureaucracy, media, judiciary, and civil society groups in shaping policy in contemporary India. By researching the evolution of nine major legislations using a consistent lens, the work interrogates the suitability of existing political theories to explain the policy development process in an emerging economy like India. It covers recent events such as the agitation for the Jan Lokpal Bill and the Nirbhaya case that have underlined the role of non-government players in law-making in India as well as long-standing movements like for right to information, right to education, and food security.

Bangladeshi Migrants in India

Foreigners, Refugees, or Infiltrators?

Rizwana Shamshad, Australian National University (ANU)

The politicization of migration of Bangladeshi migrants into India operates at the intersection of religion, ethnicity, and discourses on nationalism in India. For the Hindu nationalists operating at the All-India level, Muslims are ‘infiltrators’ and Hindus are ‘refugees’, for the Assamese ethnic nationalists both Hindu and Muslim Bengalis are ‘foreigners’. For the Bengalis in West Bengal the ethnicity ‘Bengaliness’ comes to the fore. This book argues that the perception of Bangladeshi migrants in Assam, West Bengal, and Delhi varies greatly due to the historical, ethnic and religious affinities of the people in each of the three states.

Jumpstarting South Asia

Revisiting Economic Reforms and Look East Policies

Pradumna B. Rana, Centre for Multilateralism Studies, and Wai-Mun Chia, Nanyang Technological University

This unique book analyses how further economic reforms and closer relations with East Asian countries could enhance economic growth and integration in South Asia. It makes a powerful and realistic case for a two-pronged strategy in South Asian countries to (i) complete the economic reform process that they had begun in the 1980s and 1990s and (ii) implement the second round of ‘Look East’ policies (LEP2). The book also identifies the unfinished policy reform agenda for each South Asian country and the components of the LEP2 that they should implement.

Democracy under Threat

Edited by Surendra Munshi, Indian Institute of Management, Calcutta

This book takes a close look at democracy in practice in a global perspective, highlighting challenges from within and outside. Issues such as crisis in democratic leadership, fragile state of democratic institutions, populism, caudillism, and dynasty rule are discussed, paying as much attention to the threats of authoritarianism to the democratic order. Questions have been in addition raised whether the West has failed and whether leaders such as Gandhi and Havel can help us to leave the era of post-truth behind us in order to create a humane order with reason, conscience, and responsibility.

Montaigne and the Tolerance of Politics

Douglas I. Thompson, University of South Carolina

Montaigne and the Tolerance of Politics argues for toleration as a practice of negotiation, looking to a philosopher not usually considered political: Michel de Montaigne. Douglas I. Thompson draws on Montaigne’s Essais to recover the idea that political negotiation grows out of genuine care for public goods and the establishment of political trust. This book argues that Montaigne’s view of tolerance is worth recovering and reconsidering in contemporary democratic societies where political leaders and ordinary citizens are becoming less able to talk to each other to resolve political conflicts and work for shared public goods.

Legal Reasoning and Political Conflict

Cass R. Sunstein, Harvard University School of Law

In Legal Reasoning and Political Conflict, Cass R. Sunstein, one of America's best known commentators on our legal system, offers a bold, new thesis about how the law should work in America, arguing that the courts best enable people to live together, despite their diversity, by resolving particular cases without taking sides in broader, more abstract conflicts. Whether discussing abortion, homosexuality, or free speech, the meaning of the Constitution, or the spell cast by the Warren Court, Cass Sunstein writes with grace and power, offering a striking and original vision of the role of the law in a diverse society. In this Second Edition, the author updates the previous edition bringing it into the current mainstream of twenty-first century legal reasoning and judicial decision-making focusing on the many relevant contemporary issues and developments that occurred since the initial 1996 publication.

Islam, Ethnicity and Power Politics

Constructing Pakistan’s National Identity

Rasul Bakhsh Rais, Lahore University of Management Sciences

Islam, Ethnicity, and Power Politics explores how the central state apparatus, social forces, ethnic groups, political elites, and religious factions have attempted to influence the construction of identity in Pakistan, and why it has become such a contested issue. The book analyzes the issue of identity in relation to power dynamics and competing ideologies, and argues that the choice and expression of a specific identity by contending political actors serves to claim, legitimize, and challenge power.

The Political Class

Why It Matters Who Our Politicians Are

Peter Allen, University of Bath

- Places British democracy, and the political class, under the microscope
- Argues that who our politicians are matters for reasons of both fairness and the legitimacy of political decisions
- Looks at both sides of the debate, and discusses a wide range of possible remedies for the problems associated with this controversial question of political life

There is a gap between politicians and the general public. The current British political class is widely viewed as uniform in who they are, what they think, and how they behave. A more diverse pool of politicians would not only better reflect democratic principles of equality, but may even result in better political outcomes.

Inhospitable World

Cinema in the Time of the Anthropocene

Jennifer Fay, Vanderbilt University

While standard ecological criticism attends to the environmental crisis as an unraveling of our natural state, this book looks to films and media theory to consider how they reflect upon the construction and destruction of artifactual, human environments. What are the implications of ecological inhospitality? And what role might cinema and media theory play in challenging our presumed right to occupy and populate the world? As an art form, cinema enjoys a unique relationship to the material, elemental world it captures and produces. Through it, we may appreciate the ambitions to design an unhomely planet that may no longer accommodate us.

Injustice
Political Theory for the Real World
Michael Goodhart, University of Pittsburgh
This book challenges the dominant approach to problems of justice in global normative theory and offers a radical alternative designed to transform our thinking about what kind of problem injustice is, and how political theorists might do better in understanding and addressing it. Goodhart argues that theorists can help to generate the countervailing power necessary for social transformation through the work of articulation, translation, and mapping, work which contributes to a more comprehensive social science of injustice. Ultimately, this book describes the work that political theory and political theorists can do to combat injustice and illustrates it through a novel reconceptualization of responsibility for injustice.

India and China
Competition for Naval Dominance in the Indian Ocean
Edited by David Brewster, Australian National University
China and India are emerging as major maritime powers of the Indo-Pacific as part of a changing regional balance of power. As their interests and power expand, China and India will increasingly come into contact in the shared maritime security space of the Indo-Pacific. How India and China get along in that new context – cooperation, coexistence, competition or confrontation – will be one of the key strategic challenges for the region of the 21st century.

Balbar and the Citizen Subject
Edited by Warren Montag, and Hanan Elsayed, both at Occidental College.
The 12 essays provide an overview of Balbar’s work after his collaboration with Althusser. They explain and expand his framework; in particular, by restoring Arabic and Islamic thought to the conversation on the citizen subject. The collection includes two previously untranslated essays by Balbar himself on Carl Schmitt and Thomas Hobbes.

Prehistoric Myths in Modern Political Philosophy
Karl Widerquist, Georgetown University, and Grant S. McCall, Tulane University
The state of nature, the origin of property, the origin of government, the primordial nature of inequality and war – why do political philosophers talk so much about the Stone Age? Karl Widerquist and Grant S. McCall take a philosophical look at the origin of civilisation, examining political theories to show how claims about prehistory are used. Drawing on the best available evidence from archaeology and anthropology, they show that much of what we think we know about human origins comes from philosophers’ imagination, not scientific investigation.

Writing the History of Parliament in Tudor and Early Stuart England
Edited by Paul Cavill, University of Cambridge, and Pembroke College, and Alexandra Gadja, University of Oxford, and Jesus College
Historians and literary scholars explore the rise of parliament in the historical imagination of Tudor and early Stuart England. Collectively the essays demonstrate that the evolution of historical conceptions of parliament was central to the ecclesiological and political thinking and culture of the period before the English Revolution.

Recent years have seen growing concerns about threats to academic freedom in light of the changing norms of and demands on the university. This volume brings together contributions from leading philosophers about the latest issues – ranging from safe spaces to social media controversies – and traditional challenges for academic freedom.

Academic Freedom
Edited by Jennifer Lackey. Northwestern University

There is now widespread agreement that many non-human animals are sentient, and that this fact has important moral and political implications. This book is devoted to sketching what this ‘sentientist politics’ might look like.

Reclaiming the System
Moral Responsibility, Divided Labour, and the Role of Organizations in Society
Lisa Herzog. Technical University of Munich

In this volume, prominent theorists and International Relations scholars debate the implications of cosmopolitanism for state sovereignty, suprastate legitimacy, and the reform of cities, states and regional projects – as well as some encompassing world government.

Institutional Cosmopolitanism
Edited by Luis Cabrera. Griffith University

Philosophical Foundations of Constitutional Law
Edited by David Dyzenhaus and Malcolm Thorburn, both at University of Toronto

A collection of essays from leading constitutional lawyers and theorists, examining the philosophical foundations of constitutional law and the issues that arise from the fundamental philosophical issues raised by the idea of a constitution.

Sentientist Politics
A Theory of Global Inter-Species Justice
Alasdair Cochrane. University of Sheffield

In Defense of Openness
Why Global Freedom Is the Humane Solution to Global Poverty
Bas van der Vossen. UNC Greensboro, and Jason Brennan. Georgetown University

In Defense of Openness stresses that there is overwhelming evidence that economic rights and freedom are necessary for development, and that global redistribution tends to hurt more than it helps. This book offers a new approach to global justice: We don’t need to ‘save’ the poor. The poor will save themselves, if we would only get out of their way and let them.

The Rise of Neoliberal Feminism demonstrates how the notion of a happy work-family balance has not only been incorporated into the popular imagination as a feminist ideal but also lies at the heart of a new variant of feminism, one that has abandoned any commitment to equal rights or emancipation. This book underscores the ways in which neoliberal feminism forsakes the vast majority of women, while facilitating new and intensified forms of racialized and class-stratified gender exploitation. Given our frightening neoliberal reality, the monumental challenge, then, is how we can successfully reorient and reclaim feminism as a social justice movement.

In Heretical Thought
The Rise of Neoliberal Feminism
Catherine A. Rottenberg

The Rise of Neoliberal Feminism carries out arguments that neoliberalism needs this new variant of feminism to colonize more domains. It examines the high-powered women and celebrities who are embracing this new variant of feminism.

Challenges readers to rethink the meaning of democracy and justice, freedom and equality, power, and property. Future Politics confronts the most important question of our time: how will digital technology change society?

War Crimes
Causes, Excuses, and Blame
Matthew Talbert, and Jessica Wolfendale, both at West Virginia University
Why do war crimes occur? Are perpetrators of war crimes always blameworthy? In an original and challenging thesis, this book argues that war crimes are often explained by perpetrators’ beliefs, goals, and values, and in these cases perpetrators may be blameworthy even if they sincerely believed that they were doing the right thing.

Immigration and Democracy
Sarah Song, University of California-Berkeley
How should we think about immigration and what policies should democratic societies pursue? Sarah Song offers a political theory of immigration that takes seriously both the claims of receiving countries and the claims of prospective migrants. What is required, she argues, is not a policy of open or closed borders but open doors.

Confronting Corruption
Past Concerns, Present Challenges, and Future Strategies
Fritz Heimann, Transparency International, and Mark Pieth, University of Basel, and Board of the Basel Institute on Governance
In this book, Fritz Heimann and Mark Pieth, two of the key movers who helped push anti-corruption up the political agenda, describe how the issue all came about over the last twenty-five years. They cover all of the main areas and industry sectors where corruption is particularly problematic. The book also dwells on the motivations and aspirations of corrupt individuals. In the process, the reader can develop an informed opinion and focus on corruption-related newspaper stories through the lens of anti-corruption.

In the Shadow of Korematsu
Democratic Liberties and National Security
Eric K. Yamamoto, University of Hawai‘i

This book discusses the present-day significance of the Supreme Court’s partially discredited, yet never overruled, 1944 decision upholding the constitutional validity of the mass Japanese American exclusion leading to indefinite incarceration. It charts policymakers’ and judges’ ‘chameleonic deployment’ of the muddled high court ruling alternatively to legitimate or to reject present-day security actions that undercut fundamental rights to freedom, association, religious choice, due process, and equality - rights of immigrants and citizens, protesters and justice organizations, worshippers, and journalists.

Jurisdictional Immunities of States and International Organizations

Edward Chukwuemeke Okeke

This book explores the relationship between the jurisdictional immunities of states and international organizations, in an attempt to bring clarity and predictability to the law of international immunities. Embracing a holistic approach, this book charts the history, purpose, scope, competing norms, and exceptions and waivers for the jurisdictional immunities related to states and then international organizations, respectively. Finally, it focuses on the relationship between the two areas analyzing in detail the differences and commonalities between the two.

The President and Immigration Law

Adam B. Cox, New York University Law School, and Cristina M. Rodriguez, Yale Law School

• Presents a controversial, unique thesis about the relationship between the President and immigration law
• Prompts cross-cutting constitutional theory and institutional design debates
• Presents a novel theory of de facto delegation which will resonate in numerous other areas of law

The President and Immigration Law reveals how the President has become our immigration policy-maker-in-chief. By deciding how to enforce the law, administrations shape the policy, sometimes clashing with Congress. Rather than lament this dynamic as distorting the Constitution, the authors demonstrate how it can advance the law’s legitimacy and outline political principles and institutional devices to curb potential abuses.

The Trouble with Lawyers

University, Court, and Slave
Pro-Slavery Thought in Southern Colleges and Courts and the Coming of Civil War
Alfred L. Brophy, University of North Carolina

University, Court, and Slave reveals long-forgotten connections between universities and pro-slavery thought. Proslavery faculty wrote about the economic and historical importance of slavery and helped shape a proslavery jurisprudence that made it harder to free slaves and pushed the South towards Civil War.

The Trouble with Lawyers

Rules for a Flat World
Why Humans Invented Law and How to Reinvent It for a Complex Global Economy
Gillian K. Hadfield, University of Southern California

In the paperback edition of Rules for a Flat World, economist and legal scholar Gillian Hadfield provides an updated prologue to her sweeping historical overview and reimaging of the relationship between law and economic and social prosperity. Hadfield argues for a return to first principles in building the new systems of rules we need to ensure that powerful new technologies like machine learning and globally-integrated digital societies make us all better off.

The Trouble with Lawyers

The Oxford Handbook of International Criminal Law
Edited by Kevin Heller, SOAS, University of London, Frédéric Mégret, McGill University, Sarah Nouwen, University of Cambridge, the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law, and Pembroke College, Jens Ohlin, Cornell Law School, and Darryl Robinson, Queen’s University Faculty of Law (Canada)

Moving away from conventional approaches to the study of the subject, the Oxford Handbook of International Criminal Law integrates disciplines from outside criminal law and indeed the law itself to examine areas such as its dominant actors, the rationales associated with international criminal law, and its geographical applicability.

Rentier Islamism

The influence of the Muslim Brotherhood in Gulf Monarchies

Courtney Freer

London School of Economics

While scholars have long looked at the role of political Islam in the Middle East, it has been assumed that domestic politics in the wealthy monarchical states of the Arabian Gulf, so-called ‘rentier states’ where taxes are very low and oil wealth subsidizes the needs of citizens, are largely unaffected by such movements. Using contemporary history and original empirical research, Courtney Freer updates traditional rentier state theory and argues that political Islam serves as a prominent voice and tool to promote more strictly political, and often populist or reformist, views supported by many Gulf citizens.

Book to Watch for, Chosen by Andrew R. Lewis, Religion in Public Blog

She Preached the Word

Women’s Ordination in Modern America

Benjamin R. Knoll, Centre College, and Cammie Jo Bolin

She Preached The Word offers a timely and comprehensive examination of support for women’s ordination in America’s congregations and the effect of female clergy on those in the pews. It is an essential contribution to our understanding of the intersection of gender, religion, and politics in contemporary American society.

Master Tara Singh in Indian History

Colonialism, Nationalism, and the Politics of Sikh Identity

J.S. Grewal, Punjabi University

This first comprehensive study of Master Tara Singh in two parts reveals many new facts, ideas, and perspectives. His politics based on Sikh identity lends unity to his confrontation with the colonial state and the Congress leadership. Partition of the British Punjab and formation of the Punjab Suba were essentially the results of Master Tara Singh’s vision of Sikh interests and determined efforts to protect these. He stood for a large measure of pluralism in free India.

Why Worry About Future Generations?
Samuel Scheffler
New York University

Why should we care what happens to future generations? Samuel Scheffler argues that we are more invested in the fate of our descendants than we may realize. Implicit in our own attachments are powerful reasons for wanting the chain of human generations to persist into the indefinite future under conditions conducive to human flourishing.

Outsourcing Welfare

Roy Germano
New York University

In order to meet the International Monetary Fund’s debt-reduction guidelines, many developing country governments have had to rethink their social welfare systems. This book is about how remittances – the hundreds of billions of dollars international migrants send to family members in their home countries each year – are helping to fill this welfare gap and prevent civil unrest in developing countries. Looking particularly at Mexico, with supplemental cases in Africa, the Middle East, the Caribbean, and Latin America, the author argues that counting on expatriates to send money home has become a de facto social welfare policy in many cash-strapped developing countries whose economic policies are guided by neoliberal orthodoxy.

Scarlet A

The Ethics, Law, and Politics of Ordinary Abortion

Katie Watson
Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine

- Brings statistics, philosophy, law, and headlines to life with personal stories that give the reader a window into an otherwise hidden world
- Aims to improve the American abortion debate and to inspire more substantive private conversation about abortion
- Explains current US law on abortion in terms non-lawyers can easily understand, from US Supreme Court cases to state legislation

Although statistically common, and legal since 1973, abortion still bears significant stigma – a proverbial scarlet A. Fear of this stigma leads most of the women and men who are part of the 21% of American pregnancies that end in abortion to remain silent. This book brings the story of ordinary abortion out of the shadows and invites a new conversation about its actual practice, ethics, politics, and law. Katie Watson lends her incisive legal and medical ethics expertise to navigate wisely and respectfully one of the most divisive topics of contemporary life.

Colonial Capitalism and the Dilemmas of Liberalism

Onur Ulas Ince
University of Koc

In Colonial Capitalism and the Dilemmas of Liberalism, Onur Ulas Ince combines an analysis of political economy with normative political theory to examine the formative impact of colonial economic relations on the historical development of liberal thought in Britain. Focusing on the centrality of liberal economic principles to Britain’s self-image as a peaceful commercial society, Ince investigates some of the key historical moments in which these principles were thrown into question by the processes of forcible expropriation and exploitation that typified the British imperial economy as a whole.

The Macabresque
Human Violation and Hate in Genocide, Mass Atrocity and Enemy-Making
Edward Weisband, Virginia Tech

Studies of genocide and mass atrocity most often focus on their causes and consequences, their aims and effects, and the number of people killed. But if the main goal is death, why is torture necessary? By understanding how and why mass violence occurs and the reasons for its variations, The Macabresque aims to explain why so many seemingly normal or ‘ordinary’ people participate in mass atrocity across cultures and why such egregious violence occurs repeatedly through history.

Latinos in the United States

What Everyone Needs to Know
Ilan Stavans, Amherst College

- Provides a comprehensive view of Latinos from an interdisciplinary perspective
- Argues that Latino Americans, more than any other minority group, will redefine the way the United States understands itself
- Explores the ways acculturation is leading to a new ‘mestizo’ identity that is part Hispanic and part American

While Latinos comprise a diverse minority group—with various religious beliefs, political ideologies, and social values—commentators on both sides of the political divide have lumped Latinos into a homogenous group that is often misunderstood. Latinos in the United States: What Everyone Needs to Know provides a comprehensive and thought-provoking exploration of the way that, unlike any other ethnic group, Latinos will thoroughly redefine the wave America understands itself in the future.

This series of original case studies, focusing on the proceedings and wider diplomatic significance of lavish banquets held across the period at iconic New York and London hotels like the Waldorf-Astoria and the Savoy, provides unique insights into the Pilgrims Society’s activities. Stephen Bowman challenges existing orthodoxies about the origins of public diplomacy and shows that it was only through the earlier work of semi-official organisations like the Pilgrims Society operating within a state-private nexus that greater governmental involvement in public diplomacy was legitimised.

Russia Before and After Crimea

Nationalism and Identity, 2010-2017

Edited by Pål Kolstø, University of Oslo, Helge Blakkisrud, Norwegian Institute of International Affairs

Russia’s annexation of Crimea in 2014 brought East-West relations to a low. But, by selling the annexation in starkly nationalist terms to grassroots nationalists, Putin’s popularity reached record heights. This volume examines the interactions and tensions between state and societal nationalisms before and after the annexation.

The Code of Putinism

Putin’s New Russia and the Ghosts of the Past

Shaun Walker, The Guardian

- Offers a powerful new explanation of why Putin succeeded in reviving Russia from the wreckage of the 1990s
- Shows how the memorialization of World War II in all aspects of Russian life has helped Putin stitch the country back together
- Transports readers from far eastern Siberia to Moscow to Crimea in a series of elegantly written chapters

In The Long Hangover, Shaun Walker provides a deeply reported, bottom-up explanation of Putin’s aggressive foreign policy and his support among Russians.

The Code of Putinism

Brian Taylor, Syracuse University

- Shows how the mentality of Putin and his team – the code of Putinism – has shaped Russian politics over the past two decades
- Draws on a large number of interviews, the speeches of Putin and other top officials, and the Russian media to analyze the mentality of Team Putin

This book shows how the mentality of Putin and his team has shaped Russian politics over the past two decades and makes sense of the political choices of one of the world’s most fascinating figures.

Parliamentary Elections in Russia

A Quarter-Century of Multiparty Politics

Derek S. Hutcheson, Malmo University

In the first long-term analysis of Russian parliamentary elections, Hutcheson explores the country’s seven rounds of election since 1993. Through the twists and turns of political reform, he combines official data, primary material and in-depth analysis to investigate the changes in Russia’s political system.

Modernism, Internationalism and the Russian Revolution

David Ayers, University of Kent

Modernism, Internationalism and the Russian Revolution examines responses to the Russian Revolution and the formation of League of Nations literature and journalism in the years following 1917. We see how visitors to Moscow responded to meeting Lenin, how the Bolsheviks intervened in the British public sphere, and how cultural figures such as Leonard Woolf, H.G. Wells and T.S. Eliot, debated the League and the Revolution.

The Caucasus

An Introduction, SECOND EDITION

Incentivizing Peace
How International Organizations Can Help Prevent Civil Wars in Member Countries Jaroslav Tir, University of Colorado at Boulder, and Johannes Karreth, University of Albany, and State University of New York
Civil wars are one of the most pressing problems facing the world. Common approaches such as mediation, intervention, and peacekeeping have produced some results in managing ongoing civil wars, but they fall short in preventing civil wars in the first place. Incentivizing Peace shows that considering civil wars from a developmental perspective presents opportunities to prevent the escalation of nascent, low-level armed conflicts to full-scale civil wars.

This book attempts to examine the reasons behind Pakistan’s slowdown, the volatile and inequitable growth of the last twenty-five years, and through a detailed examination of Pakistan’s institutional development, it shows how public ownership in the neoliberal era has been systematically exploited and how this exploitation has led to widespread deprivation in Balochistan:

1. Gas pricing, federal development expenditure, federal social protection, federal civil service and structure of electoral representation. It details the facts of systematic economic exploitation, discrimination and neglect that Balochistan has shouldered and continues to face.

This book is the most comprehensive and up-to-date analysis of public ownership in the United States, arguing that it is more widespread, popular, and efficient than is commonly understood. It shows how public ownership is making a comeback after decades of privatization, offering powerful solutions to many of today’s problems, and represents a key ingredient in any next system beyond neoliberal corporate capitalism.

The Original Compromise
What the Constitution’s Framers Were Really Thinking
David Brian Robertson, University of Missouri, St Louis
What were the Founding Fathers really thinking when they gathered in the Pennsylvania State House to draft the United States Constitution? When answering this question, most have relied on The Federalist Papers, which was first published in book form after the close of the Convention, in 1788. To this day, the book’s status is sacrosanct for most Americans. Yet as David Brian Robertson shows, the Papers represented one side of the debate and does not fully capture the political sensibilities that produced the U.S. Constitution. Robertson, drawing from the full range of contemporary sources and not just the Papers, provides a truly authoritative account of the founders’ collective political reasoning during the Convention.

The New Economic Populism
How States Respond to Economic Inequality
William W. Franko, West Virginia University, and Christopher Witko, University of South Carolina
There is a growing consensus among scholars that one of the biggest drivers of income inequality in the United States is government activity (or inactivity). While many Americans look to the federal government to take action to combat inequality, William Franko and Christopher Witko assert that it is the states that are best positioned and most likely to actually do something about it. The New Economic Populism argues that over time, more egalitarian policies at the state level will spread across to other states and, eventually, to the federal level.

This analytical introduction assesses contrasting definitions of black nationalism in America, thereby providing an overview of its development and varied manifestations across two centuries. Its aim is to evaluate historiographical debates and synthesize a broad range of scholarship, much of it published since the beginning of the new millennium. However, unlike some of that work, this book offers a critical perspective that avoids advocacy or condemnation of black nationalism by examining major black nationalist thinkers, leaders and organizations as well as discussing some lesser-known groups and figures, the nature of black nationalism’s appeal and the position of women in and their contributions to black nationalism.

Deadly Justice
A Statistical Portrait of the Death Penalty
Frank Baumgartner.
Marty Davidson.
Kaneisha Johnson.
Arvind Krishnamurthy.
and Colin Wilson, all at University of North Carolina

Fifty years and 1,400 executions after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the death penalty constitutional, eminent political scientist Frank Baumgartner and a team of younger scholars have collaborated to assess the empirical record and provide a definitive account of how the death penalty has been implemented. A Statistical Portrait of the Death Penalty shows that all the flaws that caused the Supreme Court to invalidate the death penalty in 1972 remain and indeed that new problems have arisen. Far from ‘perfecting the mechanism’ of death, the modern system has failed.

Who’s in the Money?
The Great Depression and Hollywood’s New Deal
Harvey Cohen,
King’s College London

Harry and Jack Warner were among the most important fundraisers of President Franklin Roosevelt during his 1932 presidential campaign. But while the Warners’ posed as exemplars of the New Deal in real life and in movies like 42nd Street and Footlight Parade, they were attempting to reverse Roosevelt’s policies within their studio and their industry. With its tales of Hollywood stars and employees fighting to win a fair share of the proceeds of their labour, the creation of Hollywood’s New Deal offers an intriguing story of financial and political power play a critical role in the emergence of state takeovers of local school districts.

Twists of Fate
Multiracial Coalitions and Minority Representation in the House of Representatives
Vanessa C. Tyson.
Scrpps College

Members of Congress from racial minority groups often find themselves in a unique predicament: they represent constituencies that are more economically disadvantaged than those of their white colleagues, and they themselves experience marginalization during the process of policy formulation on Capitol Hill. In Twists of Fate, Vanessa C. Tyson illuminates the ways in which House representatives from racial minority groups have worked together, through an understanding of their linked political fates, to advocate successfully for equality and social justice.

Is Racial Equality Unconstitutional?
Mark Golub, Scripps College

For some, the idea of a color-blind constitution signals a commonsense ideal of equality and a new ‘post-racial’ American era. For others, it supplies a narrow constitutional vision, which serves to disqualify many of the tools needed to combat persistent racial inequality in the United States. Rather than taking a position either for or against color-blindness, Mark Golub takes issue with the blindness/consciousness dichotomy itself. This book demonstrates how color-blind constitutionalism conceals its own race-conscious political commitments in defense of existing racial hierarchy, and renders the pursuit of racial justice as a constitutionally impermissible goal.

The U.S. Constitution: A Very Short Introduction
David J. Bodenhamer, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis
The U.S. Constitution: A Very Short Introduction explores the major themes of American constitutional history — federalism, the balance of powers, property, representation, equality, rights, and security. Informed by the latest scholarship, each theme illustrates how the Constitution has served as a dynamic framework for legitimating power and advancing liberty.

American Discontent: The Rise of Donald Trump and Decline of the Golden Age
John L. Campbell, Dartmouth College
In American Discontent, John L. Campbell puts Donald Trump’s ascendance to the presidency in context by focusing on the long-developing economic, racial, ideological, and political trends that set the stage for Trump and his Tea Party allies. Campbell explores the major themes and events of the early 2000s that produced an environment ripe for the rise of Trump along with the Tea Party. Campbell also explores the legacies of the 1960s and 1970s on the way in which we now conceive of equality. Black women’s sexual and reproductive history in the United States today reveals an almost complete absence of political attention to the ways in which the legacies of the 1960s and 1970s make it especially hard for black women, and all women, to win an equal say in their society. The book reveals the complicated and hard-won path to black female intimate freedom, challenging activists and organizations, historians, and legal scholars have all begun to grapple with this history and its meaning, political theorists have yet to do so.

Current Debates in American Government
James Morone, Brown University, and Ryan Emenaker, College of the Redwoods
Ideal for introductory courses, Current Debates in American Government presents over 50 lively readings drawn from major news sources including: The Economist, The Washington Post, NPR News, The New York Times, and The New Yorker. The authors selected these readings to introduce students to key debates in American politics and to help them better understand how these issues and debates affect their own lives.

Taxing Wars: The American Way of War Finance and the Decline of Democracy
Sarah E. Kreps, Cornell University
• Provides accessible case studies that illustrate the state of America’s political economy at times of war
• Offers a political and historical investigation of US wars since the founding of the Republic
• Assesses how the current funding for war in the US will affect the fiscal health of the nation in the future
In Taxing Wars, Sarah Kreps identifies that the deterioration of decision-making accountability with regard to war in the second half of the twentieth century has allowed leaders to wage increasingly costly and protracted wars. And because the health of a democracy can be measured by how responsive leaders are to an informed and attentive public in times of war, our current practices suggest that we are edging ever closer to how non-democracies conduct war.

Reactionary Republicanism: How the Tea Party in the House Paved the Way for Trump’s Victory
Bryan T. Gervais, University of Texas-San Antonio, and Irwin L. Morris, University of Maryland
• Argues that we have misunderstood the scope and complexity of the Tea Party in Congress
• Compares the Tea Party in Congress to others in the Republican caucus on a broad range of fiscal policy issues
• Connects the subgroup of constituents who were energized by a dystopic ‘digital homestyle’ to the core of the Trump voters in Reactionary Republicanism, Bryan Gervais and Irwin Morris develop the most sophisticated analysis to date for gauging the Tea Party’s impact upon the U.S. House of Representatives. They show how the relationship between Trump and the Tea Party has important implications for the trajectory of his administration and conclude with a discussion of these implications and their connection to the future of the Republican Party.

Rethinking Racial Justice
Andrew Valls, Oregon State University
The racial injustice that continues to plague the United States today isn’t a clearer challenge to the country’s idea of itself as a liberal and democratic society, where all citizens have a chance at a decent life. So what must a liberal society do to address the legacies of its past, and how should we aim to reconceive liberalism in order to do so? In this book, Andrew Valls takes issue with solutions from both the left and the right, and therefore with the constricted ways in which racial justice is debated in the United States today. They show how the relationship between Trump and the Tea Party has important implications for the trajectory of his administration and conclude with a discussion of these implications and their connection to the future of the Republican Party.

Intimate Justice
The Black Female Body and the Body Politic
Shatema Threadcraft, Dartmouth College
Black women’s sexual and reproductive history in America is one marred by forced sterilizations and coerced reproduction. While reproductive rights activists and organizations, historians, and legal scholars have all begun to grapple with this history and its meaning, political theorists have yet to do so. Intimate Justice charts the long and still incomplete path to black female intimate freedom, challenging the way in which we conceive of equality.
US POLITICS

The Branding of Right-Wing Activism
The News Media and the Tea Party
Khadijah Costley White, Rutgers University

- A multi-platform study that looks at news coverage in online, print, cable, and broadcast news.
- Argues that the Tea Party distinctively placed the news media at its center as both an organizer and active participant.
- Documents the contemporary slippages between news platforms, journalistic practice, and the norms that guide the fourth estate.

Unsurpassed
The Popular Appeal of Franklin Roosevelt
Helmut Norpoth, Stony Brook University

Franklin Roosevelt was not only the first US president to be covered by public opinion polls, but his ratings have consistently surpassed those of all subsequent sitting presidents, save for John F. Kennedy. Even US involvement in World War II – and its heavy human toll – did nothing to diminish his popularity. Yet, Roosevelt has been relatively ignored by scholars of public opinion. In this book, Helmut Norpoth takes an in-depth look at how FDR’s leadership swayed public opinion, comparing his experience to his successors’ to draw broad conclusions about what makes for successful presidential politics.

Cyberwar
How Russian Hackers and Trolls Helped Elect a President - What We Don’t, Can’t, and Do Know
Kathleen Hall Jamieson, University of Pennsylvania

- Powerful, evidence-based analysis by one of the deans of American politics on how Russian interference likely tilted the 2016 election to Donald Trump.
- Marshals unique polling data and rigorous media framing analysis to explain why in all probability the interference had an effect on the outcome.
- Provides a qualified yet compelling answer in the affirmative to the biggest question left over from the election: Did the Russians help elect Donald Trump?

In Cyberwar, the eminent scholar Kathleen Hall Jamieson, who sifted through a vast amount of polling and voting data, is able to conclude with a reasonable degree of certainty that Russian help was crucial in elevating Trump to the Oval Office.

A Duty to Resist
When Disobedience Should Be Uncivil
Candice Delmas, Northeastern University

What are our responsibilities in the face of injustice? As Candice Delmas argues, we have a duty to resist injustice, which is more important, sometimes, than our duty to obey the law. Drawing from the tradition of activists including Thoreau, Gandhi, and the Movement for Black Lives, Delmas conceptualizes and defends uncivil disobedience and explores its practices and limits. Delmas turns the traditional arguments for civil disobedience on their head, and lays out a clear argument for the duty to go beyond that to resist injustice, even by uncivil means, when necessary.

The Making of Black Lives Matter
A Brief History of an Idea
Christopher J. Lebron, Johns Hopkins University

- Presents a concise and accessible history of the rhetoric and activism that has laid the foundation for the modern #BlackLivesMatter movement.
- Argues for a renewed focus on the idea of equal standing in society for African Americans, rather than the current focus on policing and laws.
- Draws from a number of fields, including African American studies, philosophy, and political science to trace the intellectual foundations of contemporary protest strategy.

The #BlackLivesMatter movement has become a media and political phenomenon, but, as Christopher J. Lebron points out in this book, it is part of an older and richer tradition arguing for the equal dignity of black people. Lebron lays out the genesis of the ideas that have built the movement, presenting a foundational blueprint of sorts that can help us make sense of the emotions, demands, and arguments of present-day activists and public thinkers as well as recast the role of historical black thinkers in American life.

Documents of Native American Political Development
1933 to Present
David E. Wilkins, University of Minnesota

- Compiles influential legal and political writings to the formal constitutions crafted since the American intervention of the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934.
- Argues for a renewed focus on the idea of equal standing in society for African Americans, rather than the current focus on policing and laws.
- Draws from a number of fields, including African American studies, philosophy, and political science to trace the intellectual foundations of contemporary protest strategy.

The Alt-Right
What Everyone Needs to Know®
George Hawley
University of Alabama

- Looks at the history of the Alt-Right, beginning with its birth in 2008, and concluding with the deadly Charlottesville, VA rally and its aftermath in 2017
- Gives a full picture of the Alt-Right, clarifies its nature, and points out the ideological influences of the movement
- Compares and contrasts the Alt-Right to similar white nationalist movements from earlier periods of US history

This book explains the ideas, tactics, history, and prominent figures of the so-called Alt-Right, a white nationalist movement that first gained national and international prominence during the 2016 presidential election. It describes this movement’s place in contemporary American life, and how the Alt-Right relates to Donald Trump’s much larger right-wing populist movement. In clear and dispassionate terms, the book explains the degree to which the Alt-Right and other elements of the modern white supremacist movement threaten American democracy.

The Company They Keep
How Partisan Divisions Came to the Supreme Court
Neal Devins, William and Mary, and Lawrence Baum, Ohio State University

The Company They Keep advances a new way of thinking about Supreme Court decision-making. In so doing, it explains why today’s Supreme Court is the first ever in which lines of ideological division are also partisan lines between justices appointed by Republican and Democratic presidents.

A Seat at the Table
Congresswomen’s Perspectives on Why Their Presence Matters
Kira Sanbonmatsu, Kelly Dittmar, and Susan J. Carroll, all at Rutgers University

- Includes unprecedented insights from over three-quarters of the women serving in the 114th Congress
- Examines the interactions of gender with race/ethnicity, party, geography, and other factors shaping legislative behavior
- Makes a strong case for why women’s representation matters in Congress and, more generally, in American politics

A Seat at the Table examines how women in Congress assess their experiences and contributions to American politics. Drawing on personal interviews with women serving in the 114th Congress, the authors analyze the perspectives of women members as they seek to make a meaningful difference in the contemporary political environment.
