Publication dates and pricing are all subject to change. All editions listed are paperback, unless otherwise stated.
Nicola commissions print and digital resources to support teaching and learning across business, management, and marketing curriculums in the Higher Education department. Nicola would be delighted to discuss ideas for new publications in these areas, particularly from those with an active interest in technology-enhanced learning.

Nicola is also keen to develop materials that address emerging challenges faced by educators, students, and employers; she is aiming to build a suite of applied resources that are relevant for the employability needs of today’s students, as well as being theoretically robust.

After starting her publishing career as an Editorial Assistant at Routledge, Nicola joined OUP in 2013 as a Development Editor working across the Natural and Social Sciences subject areas before moving into her current role.

If you are interested in writing or reviewing for our business, management, or marketing lists, please get in touch with Nicola using the contact details to the left.

The world of international business is changing rapidly and this new text provides students with a timely update on recent developments in theory, practice and policy. Written by three leading experts in the field the book provides a rigorous and accessible review of key issues.

Professor Mark Casson, University of Reading
International Business is complemented by engaging examples and extended cases from over 65 countries and cultures, including emerging markets, to provide a truly international approach to international business.

100% of students surveyed stated the case studies and IB insights helped them make the connection between international business theory and the reality or practice of the real world.

A lot of work goes into creating a textbook
These nine steps outline the process of publishing a textbook, from the original idea to printing.

1. Publisher identifies a need in a market and contacts appropriate authors.

2. Authors and publisher write a proposal which is sent out to review and edited according to market feedback.

6. The cover and the text design are briefed, concepts are shortlisted, and a final cover is decided.

7. After many rounds of edits, the final manuscript is submitted.

8. Your editor then sends your manuscript to the production department who arrange the copyediting and typesetting.
The final proposal is taken to the editorial board and the OUP delegates for approval.

During the writing process, draft chapters are sent to academics, practitioners, and students for review and multiple rounds of edits begin.

Authors begin writing and chapters are submitted over the course of 2-4 years.

The final files are sent to the printers for printing and the book is complete!

To find out more about our publishing process or how to submit a proposal please visit www.oup.com/ukhe/authors
More than a textbook

Every business textbook from OUP includes free online resources, offering students a choice about how and where they engage with our content. Whether it’s through self-assessment tests or explanatory videos, these resources aim to support lecturers and students alike in teaching and learning.

Each book has a tailored set of resources in a variety of formats to complement and enhance the printed textbook. These can include:

- Bespoke video content from students, authors, and practitioners
- Additional case studies
- Instructor guides
- Author audio podcasts
- Multiple choice questions and flashcards
- Employability guidance and careers insights

And more...

To find out more about the online resources available with each textbook visit www.oup-arc.com or contact your campus representative.
Why publish with OUP?

OUP Higher Education is the dedicated HE department at the Press, uniquely focussed on the needs of lecturers and students to help further excellence in teaching and learning.

What you can expect from OUP:

Active editors: Our editors are extremely active in their subject areas. By attending conferences, campus calling, and engaging in research through reviewing, focus groups, and surveys, our editors remain at the forefront of the subject, putting them in the best position to adapt our publishing to match the needs of courses.

Excellence and quality: From proposal to final submission, each textbook will be reviewed by an average of 20 people (including academics, students, and practitioners) before it reaches a bookshelf. Each reviewer is an expert in their field and helps ensure our content meets the highest possible standard.

Student insight and feedback: Wherever possible our editors consult our team of student panellists; current students studying a range of business, management, and marketing degrees from institutions around the UK and Europe. Their feedback on everything from pedagogy to content layout helps us create textbooks that support student learning.

Global reach: OUP is the world’s largest academic publisher with the widest global reach. Our dedicated team of 13 higher education sales representatives in the UK, Europe, and Middle East regularly call on institutions so your book gets into the right hands.

Mission-led: We measure success in ways other than profit, and everything we publish aims to help further excellence in research, scholarship, and education. OUP is also committed to supporting education through our various goodwill initiatives, enabling us to give something back to the academic community.
Reward your most deserving students with one of our four prizes:

- Achievement in Business Prize – worth £150 of OUP books
- Bell, Bryman, and Harley Prize – worth £100 of OUP books
- Crane, Matten, Glozer, and Spence Prize – worth £100 of OUP books and £50 of books donated to Book Aid
- OUP Marketing Prize – worth £200 of OUP books

To find out more about our programme of goodwill initiatives and how you and your department can get involved please contact hecontact@oup.com or visit the website: www.oxfordtextbooks.co.uk/business
