Halloween
When Winnie and Wilbur see some unexplained footprints going right across their garden, they want to know who has made them. The pair think they might find the answer in the deep, dark forest that surrounds their home. But exploring the forest isn’t easy, especially when Winnie and Wilbur get separated. And will it help them untangle the mystery of the monster-sized footprints? With intrigue and drama from the start, this story has all the hallmarks of a classic Winnie and Wilbur adventure.

• A classic ‘whodunnit’ story.
• Everyone loves a monster mystery.

'Boo!' said the little ghost.

'Boo who?' said Winnie.

'Don’t cry!' said the little ghost.

'Oh, very funny!' said Winnie. 'Are you going to the party? Can we come with you?'

So Winnie and Wilbur went to the party dressed as plain old Winnie and plain old Wilbur, taking their food and decorations with them.

making Winnie spin like a top. 'Oh dear, I don’t know what else I can try!' said dizzy Winnie.

'Winnieee!' yelled her dooryell again.

This time a little-ordinary skeleton and a little-ordinary ghost stood on the doorstep.

'Don’t stand still, Mrs Parmar!' said Winnie. 'My spiders are making webs on anything that stays still for a single maggoty-moment! Dance to keep them off you!'

So even Mrs Parmar joined in with the dancing. Winnie and Wilbur went wild.

'Come in, come in!' said Mrs Pumpkin Parmar when they got to the school.

'Come and join in the fun.'

There was apple bobbing.

And pin the cat on the broomstick.

'Mrrrow!' said Wilbur.

There was dancing to the Bony Band of Skeletons.

in the woods inside. ‘Please let it snow for Sita this Christmas,’ she whispered quietly. The globe lit up brightly for a second and Lucy felt a tingling excitement run through her. Was it her imagination or could she hear tinkling sleigh bells? Lucy felt a little Christmasy flutter of happiness.

‘Goodnight, Lucy—I can’t wait to explore tomorrow morning! I think this Christmas is going to be so much fun!’ said Sita.

‘I do too,’ said Lucy, and glanced over at the snow globe. ‘And maybe a little magical too,’ she said hopefully to herself, as she drifted off to sleep.

Chapter Two

Lucy and Sita slept in late the next day. Lucy felt Mistletoe’s soft ears next to her on the pillow, and opened her eyes. She wasn’t quite sure where she was at first, but it was great to see Sita sitting up in bed. They had so much to talk about! Lucy told Sita all about how busy their friend Rosie’s farm and café were doing. Sita showed Lucy pictures of her friends in Australia and some of the wildlife she had seen since she was there, but she missed you and I’m looking forward to seeing you tomorrow,’ said Sita.

‘Hey! Who are you?’ Lucy laughed. Sita came out of the bathroom wearing her jeans and pulling a Christmassy jumper on over her head.

‘Sita of course,’ she said, puzzled, and then saw the kitten.

‘Oh! It is so cute!’ she said.

The tiny kitten rolled over on its back to be tickled by the girls, but then twisted around and pounced on Scruffy and Mistletoe as if expecting them to play. Then it ran to the side of the bed and jumped down.

That’s a huge leap for a little kitten!’ said Lucy. ‘Oh no you don’t!’ and she grabbed it as it started to climb up the curtains. ‘This is our holiday house—we don’t want you to ruin it. We’d better take you downstairs and find out who you belong to.

It was nice holding a fluffy warm kitten. It was bright and inquisitive with beautiful big blue eyes.

‘What a sweet kitten!’ said Lucy’s mum as they came into the kitchen.

‘He is bringing Charlie, his spaniel with him! And Oscar will love talking to my grandad because he knows so much about the stars.’

Sita gave a big yawn and snuggled down under the covers. Lucy leaned over and shook the globe so that the snow fell over the little house in the woods inside. ‘Please let it snow for Sita this Christmas,’ she whispered quietly. The globe lit up brightly for a second and Lucy felt a little Christmasy flutter of happiness.

‘Goodnight, Lucy—I can’t wait to explore tomorrow morning! I think this Christmas is going to be so much fun!’ said Sita.

‘I do too,’ said Lucy, and glanced over at the snow globe. ‘And maybe a little magical too,’ she said hopefully to herself, as she drifted off to sleep.

The Pied Piper turned into a dark alley, and then he took out his flute and began to play. Every man and woman in Hamelin stood quite still, as though they’d been bewitched. But the children . . . oh! The children were pulled towards it as if by a magnet. They had to follow, had to leave everything they had ever known, and follow the Pied Piper on and on.

The tune was a simple melody, as sweet and golden as melted sugar. It twisted into the air and spread out into every corner of the town.

‘Come back! Come back!’ called the Prince, but Cinderella kept on running.

She reached the door and ran down the steps as fast as she could.

One of her slippers fell off, but still she kept running.

‘Come back! Come back!’ She heard the Prince calling as she looked around wildly.

Ten!

Eleven!

Twelve!

Speed Birds
WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY ALAN SNOW

A spectacularly illustrated story and introduction to how cars work.

The story of one young crow’s wish to be the fastest bird on earth—with incredibly detailed artwork, and real engineering facts—this is a fantastic introduction to how cars work, perfect for any budding young engineer.

- A highly original picture-book story that also introduces how cars work.
- Publishing at a time when land-speed record attempts have a high profile in the UK, thanks to the Bloodhound speed attempt and schools’ education programme.
- The authenticity of the car and detailed equipment featured in the book will appeal to land-speed enthusiasts of all ages, as well as children.

Once the paint was dry, the seat and steering wheel were bolted in, and finally the two halves of the belly tank were fixed over the frame—the crows had a car!

The birds gathered around the car and stared in wonderment. They decided that the car deserved a name and called it... 'SPEED BIRD.'

'Now I'm going to show you how we should time our speed-record attempt,' said the small bird. 'We have to measure out a straight mile on the salt lake, with a long tape, and then time how many seconds it takes to drive the course. If we divide the number of seconds in an hour, which is 3600 seconds, by the seconds it takes to drive the mile, that will tell us the speed of the car in miles per hour.'

'Enough of all that,' cawed another bird, looking at the little crow. 'Can't we just start it up and go?'

The little crow smiled. 'This is no ordinary car,' he said. 'Most cars have a battery-powered motor to start the engine. We'll need to get this one going a different way. Are you all ready for one more job?'

'Speed Bird' really lives up to its name,' said the small bird. 'I think we are ready to try again.'

The crows refueled the car, checked the oil, water, and tyres, then pulled it back out onto the salt lake.

One evening, when the crows were longing for rest, they spied an old tree on the horizon. 'Let's roost here,' said one of the birds. 'This lone tree won't make much of a home, but we'll have some freedom from the wind and the rain.'

The small crow said nothing. There was something very interesting about that tree. It was too dark to see properly now—but in the morning he would be able to investigate.

Steve, Terror of the Seas

WRITTEN AND ILLUSTRATED BY MEGAN BREWIS

The almost-true story of Steve, the very scary fish.

Steve is not very big. His teeth aren’t very sharp. And though he’s no angelfish, there are far scarier creatures in the sea. So why is everyone so frightened of Steve?

With a brilliant new voice and distinctive art style, Megan Brewis is definitely ‘one to watch’.

- A very funny story that has basis in reality (the symbiotic relationship between pilot fish and sharks).
- The story introduces a range of sea creatures in a fun and appealing way.

So it wasn’t a real dragon after all, said Zip. This was just a big woolly! Oh, it wasn’t so scary after all! Hurray!”

With slighty raised voice, said Baby Woolly, “Whoops! I do like being a Woolly.”

“Don’t worry the sun will soon dry you out!”

“Yeah, I bet! Whoops! I’ll never win a maraca competition again!”

“Bien encore, Bling! You’ll still be the best!”

“Still, a dragon giggle!”

“Boom, boom, boom went the big bass drum.”

“Dee de lee de lee went the banjo.”

“Chooka chooka chooka went the maracas.”

Baby Woolly led the parade!

Kevin the flying pony blows in on a magical storm and—DOOF!—crashes into the balcony outside Max’s flat. As the storm waters rise and the town is besieged by creatures (naughty sea monkeys—eeep, eep!), Max and Kevin set about putting things right.

With Max’s quick thinking and a constant supply of biscuits for Kevin, there’s nothing this heroic duo can’t achieve!

- A brand new series from creative powerhouse Reeve and McIntyre.
- Highly illustrated with hilarious two-colour illustrations.
- Features a whole host of quirky, endearing characters, with Max and his roly-poly flying pony, Kevin, at its heart.
No,' said Max, holding the three custard creams carefully out of sight behind his back.

'Hmmm,' said Daisy. She wasn't stupid, and she thought he looked exactly like a person who was hiding three stolen biscuits behind his back. (She couldn't tell they were custard creams, though—she wasn't that good.) 'Well, get back to bed and leave me to my sad and important thoughts, or I'll tell Mum and Dad.'

Max shrugged, and hurried off to his bedroom.

'Oooh, custard creams!' said Kevin, when he saw the biscuits in Max's hand. They were a bit squashed because Max had sort of squeezed them when Daisy made him jump, but Kevin didn't seem to mind.

Kevin flapped his small wings as hard as they would flap, but the wind was too strong for him. It carried him high into the sky. It blew him far across the wild, wet hills. It blew him over roads and rivers, all the way to the places where ordinary people lived—people who didn't believe in flying ponies.

'No,' said Max, hiding the three custard creams carefully out of sight behind his back.

He blew past electricity pylons and mobile phone masts and forests of chimneys, until at last, with a loud thud, he bumped into the side of a tall building.

'Bother!' said Kevin.

Kevin flapped his small wings as hard as they would flap, but the wind was too strong for him. It carried him high into the sky. It blew him far across the wild, wet hills. It blew him over roads and rivers, all the way to the places where ordinary people lived—people who didn't believe in flying ponies.

Another bee! But this one is even larger than the big bees chasing us.

Here they come.

‘GO!’ I scream, half a second before they hit us. And as we race to safety, our giant attackers smash into the glowing sunball, and sizzle to a crisp.

That’s when things go wrong.

‘Look, Mr. Storer, 6664 is growing!’

And you know!

And glowing yellow!

And growing!

Yes! The girls, bigger, Mr. Storer!

It’s true 6664 is expanding before our eyes. She’s glowing yellow, and her yawns have turned into growls!

I feel sick.

‘Mel! You’ve turned yellow!’ Priti cries.

‘It’s the bee’s knees!’

‘GO!’ I scream, half a second before they hit us. And as we race to safety, our giant attackers smash into the glowing sunball, and sizzle to a crisp.

‘Get that thing away from me!’ he screams.

The glowing bee is zooming in for a second attack. I jump in front of Berty, and shield us with my arms but . . .

Lightning fast, the zombee stabs me in the neck, squirting poison through its needle-sharp stinger, then it’s off and spiralling around us, ready to attack again! I drop to the ground, clutching my neck, but Priti takes over and as the big bug flies towards us she swings her satchel, sending it spinning onto the road.

Berty Crump’s eyes are the size of saucers – he is frozen with fear.

‘Don’t move until I say!’ I shout.

I jump in front of Berty, and shield us with my arms but . . .

GRARRZZZZ!

ZZZP!

‘ZZOINK!’

And it whizzes past but turns to attack us again.

‘READY TO ATTACK AGAIN!’

I drop to the ground, clutching my neck, but Priti takes over and as the big bug flies towards us she swings her satchel, sending it spinning onto the road.

Grandad followed a bit less mathematically, muttering something about his knees and it being Too Early to be the Morning for Horace. Hand trophies you can see the enemy has already taken formation, Horace whispered. But we shall shortly have a surprise attack of our own! I have already prepared our weapons. He darted behind me, where there were some two branches and dustbin lids stacked up. Barry had a rag. Grandad rolled his eyes. ‘Those are the types of people who are cause for immediate concern. Equipped with Ops and all! I’ve continued lurking at a spot who were unloading long pointed objects.

There were a few mutterings of ‘hello’ back.

‘Now come on, I know it’s a Monday morning, but I think we can do better than that. Let’s try it again. Hello TEACHERS!’

‘Hello Mr Minister of Education . . . ’ came the awkward reply.

‘Well I suppose that’ll have to do. Yes it seems I am the person in charge of all things to do with schools. Basically, I’m your boss, but I don’t want you to think of me as a boss; even though I am your boss, I want you to think of me as your friend. I’m friend first and boss second. A very close second, I am still your boss after all and you shouldn’t ever forget that, and I say that as your friend. I’m a friend first, a boss second, and probably a dude third. Actually, can I be a dude first and a boss second and the other thing third?

‘Anyway, it’s lovely to be here, speaking to you today about all things teachery . . . is that a word? I’m going to level with you, I forgot my speech, but that’s OK because what I have to say doesn’t come from a bit of paper, it comes from the heart. Well the mustache actually. Let’s talk food. I was visiting a school the other week, and I had carrot sticks and something called hummus for lunch, which doesn’t even sound like a real thing to me. I’m sure some kids like it, but frankly I thought it was rubbish. Something must be done. Now there’s a lot of emphasis on healthy food hands together.

‘But how?’ Sophie and the General asked at the same time.

‘With a big dunk,’ Ajay winked. ‘I need to speak to the Minister of Tea in the UK.’

Ten minutes later, Ajay was on the phone to Mrs Perkins, the Prime Minister’s mum.

‘Mrs P I need to talk to you about dunking,’ Ajay said, his feet up on the table, his cape waving behind his chair.

‘Duncan who?’ Joe’s mum yelled back.

‘No, not Duncan. DUNKING you do with biscuits,’ Ajay yelled back.

‘Sorry, the line’s a bit dodgy. I’m shopping and the signal’s not very good either, I think I’m picking up interference,’ Mrs Perkins yelled out.

‘That’s OK. Now let’s talk biscuits best for dunking? Has there been any research on the subject?’

‘Not really, just my own research. It depends what you’re looking for really, what did you have in mind? Are we talking flavour, robustness . . .?’

‘Well, ideally I want one that can suck up millions of gallons of coffee and cream without damaging the water and fishes too,’ Ajay replied. ‘There was a moment of silence from the other end of the phone.

‘You’re probably going to need a jumbo packet then, Ajay, do you want me to pick you one up?’

‘Nah, I don’t think that’s going to cut it,’ Ajay said, shaking his head. ‘What’s the best biscuit for sucking up coffee?’

‘This is British Airways Flight BA73835 from London to New York. This is your Captain speaking. We will begin our decent into JFK airport shortly. I would like to thank you for flying with us and once again apologies for the slight bumpiness during the flight. That is the last time I offer to show any present, future, or past Ambassadors round the cockpit, let alone turn my back for a second so he could try and write his name in the sky. Particular apologies go to those who ordered the soup; the hair dryer is available in first class.’
Riddle of the Runes
WRITTEN BY JANINA RAMIREZ
ILLUSTRATED BY DAVID WYATT

Runes, riddles, and revenge—a thrilling new mystery series, set in the age of Vikings.

Be it missing warriors, riddles carved in runes, or tales of treasure—the Viking town of Kilsgard has its fair share of mysteries, and in this exciting new series, shield maiden Alva and her pet sniffer wolf, Fenrir, follow the clues to solve them. Fierce, stubborn, and curious, Alva’s bound to get in trouble along the way—but all that matters is being first to the crime scene.

• Dramatic mysteries in an exciting Viking setting—written by a passionate Viking expert.

• Turn to the back of the book to decipher runes and learn more about the fascinating world of the Vikings.

• Highly appealing for fans of classic murder mysteries and historical fiction.

• With black and white illustrations.

Since the 1.34 a.m. wake up calls began, Elena, Matt, and Tima have all had the power to talk to animals, birds, and insects like no other human can. None of them would ever trade that for a full eight hours of sleep. It is just too amazing.

But an amazing life has its complications. Like finding a body in the dark, or having to stop the world from ending. You can fit a lot in to your day when you don’t sleep.

• An exciting take on the action-adventure genre—the action takes place at night!

• Ali Sparkes’ trademark blend of realistic, contemporary characters and concerns—a supernatural twist—a thrilling pace—and a large dash of humour.

• Appealing central hook of kids who can communicate with and control animals.
Fearless stunt double Finn is in Thailand working on the latest Rio Dinoni blockbuster. It’s a dream job, but are the whispers around set true? Is the film really cursed? When stunt after stunt goes wrong, filming starts to get really dangerous. So far, Finn’s survived all sorts of smashes and crashes, even an elephant stampede, but it’s the secrets on set that might finally break him.

• Author Tamsin Cooke is back, with yet another fast-paced thriller.
• A cool, contemporary, all-action story in an exciting film-location setting.
• Free-running, stunt double Finn is a fantastic adventure hero.
Ronja the Robber’s Daughter
WRITTEN BY ASTRID LINDGREN

Ronja lives with her father, a robber chieftain, and his band of men in their fortress on the top of a mountain. She loves to explore the forest around her, and learns to beware of the grey dwarfs and wild harpies that live there. But then she strays into a far greater danger—a friendship with Birk, the son of her father’s arch-enemy.

Ronja and Birk know they must keep their friendship a secret. But one day Ronja’s father catches Birk . . . prompting Ronja and Birk to escape into the woods and fend for themselves.

How long can Ronja and Birk survive in the magical forest? And will their fathers ever put aside their differences to get their beloved children back?

• A classic and unforgettable story of friendship and magic.
• From Astrid Lindgren, one of the bestselling children’s authors of all time.
• Now a wonderful Studio Ghibli animated TV series.

Oxford Primary Dictionary

Major new edition of this bestselling dictionary for all primary school children.

Now featuring more vocabulary; from a range of areas such as animals, history, mythology, space, and science fiction, as well as fictional creatures and places from children’s reading—for example, hobbit, Muggle, and Bandersnatch. Examples from authors such as Cressida Cowell and J. K. Rowling inspire young readers, and word origins, spelling alerts, and help locating tricky-to-find words makes this the ideal dictionary for primary children.

• More vocabulary and support to help children understand how words are used in different contexts.

• Enhanced supplement providing grammar support.

• Word origins and notes make spelling, grammar and punctuation fun.

• Powered by the Oxford Corpus, with examples from the authors children love to read, e.g. Roald Dahl, Lewis Carroll, Philip Pullman, and more.

• With free online activities to build language skills.
