The publisher likes the manuscript this author has written and thinks people will want to buy the book, so she decides to publish it. Publishing a book means turning a manuscript into a book, getting it printed, and selling it.

She begins by getting a team of people together to help make the book.

Author (writes the book)

Publisher (leads the team)

Editor (looks after the ‘text’ – all the words in the book)

Artist (draws and colours the ‘artwork’ – the pictures and diagrams)

Designer (designs the pages and the book cover)

Printer (looks after the printing machines)

Production manager (organizes the printing of the book)

Photographer (takes photographs especially for this book)
